By Howard F. Wentworth.

Adopting a new policy of ironclad traffic enforcement, with increased efforts toward safety education, 19 police officials—precinct commanders and district inspectors—met in extraordinary session with two Commissioners and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday to plan immediate steps for control of Washington's rising highway death toll.

During a spirited two-hour meeting—the first of its kind in recent years—Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen called on the Police Department for city-wide co-ordination of traffic enforcement and control efforts. Accident prevention, he told the officials, is of paramount importance.

Forcing attention on a need for a new alignment of the city's traffic enforcement agencies was the city's latest and youngest 1937 auto death—4-year-old Richard Levy—hit by an auto Tuesday night near his home at 2929 Twenty-eighth street northwest.

Driver Exonerated.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated the driver of the car that struck the Levy boy, Robert J. Saunders, 28, of Broad Branch and Grant roads northwest, after hearing the testimony of several witnesses, including the child's father, John Levy.

The 25-foot roadway in front of the Levy home with cars parked on both sides and the approaching dusk made it impossible for Saunders to see the boy as he darted rom behind his father's parked car, witnesses said.

Beginning today, policemen afoot and mounted will concentrate on three types of highway violations conceded to cause the majority of accidents—turning from improper lanes, failing to give hand signals and right of way, and parking too close to busy intersections.

Determined to mobilize a traffic control machine second to none in the country, Commissioner Hazen announced yesterday's meeting would be repeated once a month until the Washington death and injury rate shows a marked improvement.

Second Precinct "Danger Spot."

A chart, compiled by Van Duzer during the last several months, showed the city's accident record, precinct by precinct. During the first half of this year, the traffic inspector said, highway mishaps have increased 39.4 per cent over the same period of 1936.

The Second Precinct, a survey revealed, is Washington's "danger section." A 77 per cent rise in accidents was noted in this precinct during the first six months of this year, as compared to the "safest" precinct—No. 1—with an 8 per cent increase. No precinct, it was pointed out, showed an accident decrease over the six-month period.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, acting superintendent of police during the vacation of Maj. Brown, urged his commanding officers to give the local traffic problem their utmost attention, reminding that 15 more deaths have occurred in the District this year than last.

To awaken policemen to their responsibilities in traffic control, Inspector William E. Holmes, traffic supervisor, suggested three-minute "pep" talks at each police roll call. He urged commanding officers to stress the importance of enforcing laws which mean the difference between life and death.

Committee Named.

Hazen promised yesterday's meeting would not end with "just a lot of talking." He appointed a committee, headed by Van Duzer, to analyze the discussion and draft recommendations. Other members of the committee are Holmes and Capt. Arthur Miller, of the Third Precinct.

In urging strict enforcement of accident-contributing violations, Edwards struck at double-parked commercial vehicles and trucks. He cited cases where large trucks park in the center of the street when ample space is available at the curb. Merchants and business men, he

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 4.—Branch offices of the Birth Control League of Massachusetts, beset by police raids, tonight prepared to discontinue operations on recommendations of the league's executive board.

Mrs. Leslie D. Hawkridge, a social leader and president of the league, said the executive board, "in spite of its complete confidence in the legality of the work," decided to recommend to mothers' health offices, branch clinics of the league, that they close pending a court decision.

The offices, she said, were located in Worcester, Springfield, New Bedford and Fitchburg. Police have already closed offices in Salem, Brookline and Boston.

Expressing "regret that so many persons confused birth control with abortion," Mrs. Hawkridge said the league's offices "never accepted pregnant patients." She asserted recent raids would "hamper the league not only in its fight against the abortion evil, but also in its crusade against widespread traffic in bootleg contraceptives."

Thirty-five per cent of the Brookline mothers' health office patients, she said, were referred by recognized social agencies, and 48 per cent by leading hospitals in Greater Boston.

Meanwhile Dr. Ilia Galleani, fashionable Back Bay woman's physician, awaited trial on a charge of "unlawfully exhibiting and offering for sale drugs, medicine and instruments intended to prevent conception."

Arrested in a raid on a Brookline clinic, Dr. Galleani pleaded innocent in Brookline District Court today and was released in $500 bond for a hearing August 19. At that time, the court said, it would decide whether articles seized in the raid should be returned to the league or retained by the police.

DR. ILIA GALLEANI.

Mrs. Hawkridge, who with other Blue Book registerites and prominent physicians have been interested in the league's activities, said the league was confident court decisions would soon confirm the right of physicians to give contraceptive advice to "sick married women" to preserve life "as approved by the American Medical Association."

Mrs. Hawkridge was one of sev-

4 Parachutes Sighted by Searchers; Virginian Among 6 Aboard.

By the United Press.

Cristobal, C. Z., Aug. 4.—Two U. S. Army fliers were reported missing in the dense jungles of southwestern Panama today after they and four other passengers had parachuted from a Bellanca transport plane which crashed and burned in Chiriqui Province.

Ground crews prepared to race to the scene after searching planes, which flew over the jungles, reported that only four parachutes, laid out in a manner to indicate survivors, were sighted.

Although Col. B. G. Weir, commander at Albrook Field, announced two of the Bellanca's passengers were still missing, there was some confusion regarding the number of occupants of the transport when it crashed after leaving Rio Hato for David. It was suggested some of the original six men may have remained at Rio Hato.

Army authorities did not immediately indicate which of the occupants of the plane were missing or who was piloting it. The list of passengers as announced here follows:

Lieut. T. J. Schoefield, 28, of Pittsburgh.

Lose Hope in Air Crash.

Christobal, Canal Zone, Aug. 4 (AP).—Hope waned today for the recovery of the fusilage of the Pan American-Grace airliner, in which 14 persons apparently met death in the sea off Panama.

The Navy Department in Washington disclosed there was evidence an explosion occurred aboard the plane at the time of the crash.

A dispatch from the naval commandant in the Canal Zone reported an examination of recovered wreckage indicated the plane crashed at a high speed and broke into small parts.

Despite a drizzling rain, the United States Navy pressed an intensive search for the cabin of the wrecked plane. It was believed it may have sunk in more than 1,000 feet of water with the bodies of the passengers.

G. O. P. to Choose Vandenberg in '40, Farley's Prophecy

Mount Vernon, Ohio, Aug 4 (AP).—The Presidential campaign in 1940 will be a contest between the Democratic standard bearer and Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan, Republican, with no third party involved, Postmaster General James A. Farley predicted in an interview today.

The Democratic national chairman, swinging through central Ohio on his way to an Akron district celebration late today, in answer to a question about the probable Republican nominee, said:

"It undoubtedly will be Senator Vandenberg—they haven't anyone else."

"I have no fear that there will be a third party in 1940," Farley asserted.

D. C. Tax Bill Passed, Sent To Roosevelt

The conference report on the bill, designed to raise an additional $9,000,000 in taxes, was adopted by the Senate yesterday in less than a minute. The House had given its approval the day before.

In its final form the bill retains the Tydings "price maintenance" rider. A fight had been expected on this, but it didn't materialize. President Roosevelt has been opposed to the rider on the ground that it would increase the cost of living.

The rider, tacked on to the bill by Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, is aimed at the practice of some chain stores and others of selling an article below cost to attract customers who are expected to buy other profitable articles. Opponents say the rider's net result will be to increase the cost of living. The District of Columbia would not be affected.

Whether President Roosevelt feels strongly enough about the Tydings rider to veto the District tax bill remains to be seen. Supporters of the rider gave assurance yesterday that he would not.

The new tax bill not only provides for additional revenue to meet an anticipated deficit of $7,000,000, but it authorizes the District Commissioners to borrow money to tide the city over until that revenue starts coming in.

3 Must Die, 5 Jailed By Reds in Food Case

Moscow, Aug. 4 (AP).—Three officials of the Novorossisk Food Trust were sentenced to death and five others to one-year prison sentences today for "trying to wreck workers' markets." They were accused of permitting the sale of bad sausages, which allegedly poisoned 120 persons.

Japan Rushes Her Civilians Out of China

Major War Fear Grows as Army Moves South to Meet Chiang.

2 Americans Reported Mauled by Patrols of Tokyo Troops.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday) Aug. 5.—Hurried evacuation of Japanese noncombatants from a vast area of China caused fear today that Japan's week-old undeclared war in North China might spread deeper than had been expected.

Japanese reports disclosed withdrawals of Japanese nationals were being effected with increasing rapidity and were drawing Japanese residents even from China's interior.

Japanese women and children crowded trains into Canton to take ship for Japan. More than 3,000 Japanese concentrated at the Port of Tsingtao.

Even from South Central China, reports arrived that many Japanese were en route here and to other coastal cities from Hunan and Kweichow Provinces.

Fear for Chinese in Japan.

At the same time, authorities in Nanking were said to fear for the safety of 8,000 Chinese nationals in Japan and to have considered evacuating them.

The theater of war shifted definitely to the South, apparently toward an impending clash between both nations' main forces. Two Japanese columns, one in eastern Hopei Province and the other in western Hopei, penetrated steadily southward to strike at the central Chinese government's first-line defenses. Japanese commanders reported virtually no opposition.

The Eastern column was said to be about 20 miles from the Chinese vanguard near the Hopei-Shantung province border. The parallel Western column, at a point about 20 miles southwest of Tientsin, was believed to be about the same distance from an arm of the Chinese forces along the Pukon-Tientsin railroad.

Inpouring reinforcements, authoritative reports indicated, multiplied Japan's war material and raised to about 25,000 the number of her well-equipped, fully-armed effectives.

Head for Great Wall.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, commander of the Nanking forces, was believed to have massed about 50,000 troops in Southwestern Hopei and a somewhat smaller force in the southeast.

About 20 miles north of Peiping, meanwhile, another Japanese army marched north toward Hankow Pass to attack Chinese positions along China's Great Wall.

Japanese communiques reported air raiders bombed Chinese troops and trains near Kalgan, along the Great Wall in the region where the opposing armies were expected to meet. All Japanese nationals were ordered to evacuate Kalgan, a Chinese stronghold and capital of Chahar Province.

The Japanese also continued hunting down alleged mutineers to retaliate for the reported Tungchow massacre last Thursday in which the Japanese civilian population of East Hopei, was said to have been virtually wiped out.

Heavy forces of Japanese concentrated today in Peiping, the first Japanese troops to enter the city during the crisis except for the normal embassy guard.

Two Americans Beaten.

Peiping (Thursday), Aug. 5 (U.P.).—Two Americans were mauled by Japanese military patrols late yesterday, according to embassy reports today. The Americans are Sheridan Fahnestock, described as a New York writer who contributes to the travel section of the Herald Tribune, and Mrs. Joy Lacks, a photographer.

Fahnestock was hit three times in the face when he attempted to photograph a Japanese military parade passing a hotel on the edge of the diplomatic quarter. Mrs. Lacks was pushed aside and the lenses of her camera covered.

Senate Cuts Home Units To $4,000

Over vigorous protests of housing bill sponsors, the Senate yesterday limited the cost of new slum clearance homes to $4,000 each or $1,000 a room, by the marginal vote of 40 to 39.

The limitation followed bitter denunciation of "wasteful" housing outlays by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, and hot challenge of the bill's "honesty" by Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland.

Vote came on an amendment by Byrd after Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, author of the bill, warned "it will kill this legislation."

Operating under a debate limitation, the Senate failed to get a final vote on the bill after a flurry of last-minute amendments. A recess was taken, and a decisive ballot will be sought today.

"Demonstration" Out.

Byrd's amendment was one of a series rigidly modifying the original scope of the bill. On motion of Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, the Senate threw out of the bill a section authorizing housing projects for "demonstration" purposes.

The first modifying change was sponsored by Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, following a call at the White House. It requires Presidential approval of all expenditures, grants or loans under the $700,000,000 program.

Other changes would reduce members of the new housing authority from five to three, and permit the General Accounting Office to audit currently only general administrative expenses, leaving loans, grants and contributions to a "post audit." Another change required installation of playgrounds and playground equipment in connection with all housing projects.

Attack in Full Cry.

Tuesday the Senate eliminated from the bill loans to limited profit organizations or consumer housing societies, and boosted by one-half of 1 per cent the interest charge on Federal loans for low-cost housing projects.

The attack on the bill was in full cry when the Senate recessed. An amendment was pending by Senators Adams and Johnson, of Colorado, requiring apportioning of housing funds among the States by population. When Wagner warned New York has about 10 per cent of the population, Senator Tydings promptly offered a substitute providing no State shall receive more than 10 per cent of Federal housing funds.

There was a futile attempt by Senator Walter F. George to limit the life of the housing authority (which may make 60-year loans),

Ohio Jails Four 'Fanatic' Bombers

Warren, Ohio, Aug. 4 (AP).—Judge Lynn B. Griffith told four convicted steel strike bombers today they did "not represent union labor," but "a loathsome fanaticism," and sentenced them to serve 1 to 20 years in Ohio State Prison.

The men had pleaded guilty to illegal possession of explosives in connection with three bombings here at the height of the C. I. O. strike for a signed contract from Republic Steel Corporation.

Sentencing of a fourth defendant, John Barawiec, was postponed; two other men were placed on parole. Gus Hall, deposed C. I. O. organizer, declared by Police Chief Barney J. Gillen to have been the "brains" of the bombings, will go on trial in September. He was the only one of the eight defendants to plead innocent.

Senate Pay Bill Saved By House Committee, Power Over Labor Cut

N. Y. Janitor Held After Putnam Pays Out $1,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 4. — Wilbur Rothar, a janitor, was charged with extortion tonight after he tried to get $2,000 from George Palmer Putnam for "rescuing" his wife, Amelia Earhart.

Rothar used a brown and white scarf Miss Earhart lost several years ago as "proof" that he and the fictitious crew of a boat running guns and munitions to Spain found Miss Earhart, who disappeared more than a month ago on a flight across the Pacific.

Rhea Whitley, agent in charge of the Department of Justice, New York office, said Rothar confessed.

Putnam told Federal agents that on July 31 he received a note which said:

"We have your wife on the ship. I will call Sunday at 2 o'clock. (signed) Johnson."

Whitley said Rothar telephoned Putnam and made an appointment for 2 a. m. the next day. He met Putnam yesterday and said that he was sailing on a vessel, carrying arms to Spain, which left New Guinea late in June.

The boat, Rothar said, according to Whitley, stopped at a small island in the South Pacific and found a wrecked plane with the body of a man on top of it. Sharks had mutilated the body. A woman was on shore, injured and mentally deranged. The crew buried the man at sea and took the woman aboard.

The ship next stopped at Panama, where the crew discovered that their passenger was Miss Earhart. The crew decided to go to New York and selected Rothar to contact Putnam.

The flier's husband informed Federal agents, so that when Rothar called at Putnam's office yesterday to collect the money a G-man acted as Putnam's secretary. Putnam paid Rothar $1,000. The "secretary" said he would take Rothar to a bank in the building to get the other $1,000.

Other agents arrested Rothar as he and the "secretary" got out of the elevator.

Rothar found the scarf at Roosevelt Field and kept it as a souvenir until Miss Earhart disappeared. Whitley said Rothar had not been to sea for 15 years.

Report Expected Today and Passage Next Week.

Green Hails Adding Of 8 Amendments

By Sidney Olson.

Whittling down the vast and vaguely defined powers given a proposed labor standards board by the Senate, the House Labor Committee yesterday finished a new wages-hours bill, with a report set for today, a favorable rule expected by the week-end, and passage of the measure predicted for next wek.

The committee members, wielding big red pencils and scissors with utmost freedom, took the text of the Senate bill as their framework, added to it eight separate amendments suggested by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and struck from it a flock of Senate additions.

Chairman Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, offered nine amendments suggested by Green. Eight of them passed and but one—a provision regarding child labor—failed. This failure came only because the committee already had slashed from the Senate bill the last-minute insertion by the upper chamber of the Wheeler-Johnson child labor bill in place of the original child labor provision suggested by Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee.

Conference Fight Foreseen.

The House group, acting in accord and with swift precision throughout the day, re-inserted the original Black child labor section, after dropping the Wheeler-Johnson portion.

This action, coupled with the committee's gesture in tossing into the waste basket a Senate action requiring confirmation of $4,000-a-year officials, presaged a vigorous battle in the Senate-House conference after the bill passes the House.

Three of Green's amendments were important. These include a section requiring that a labor standard order establishing minimum wages or a maximum work week may be made only if the board, on investigation finds collective bargaining agreements do not cover a substantial portion of workers in an occupation, or that "existing facilities for collective bargaining in such occupation are inadequate or ineffective."

Another stipulated that a labor standard order may not set for any locality a lower minimum wage or longer maximum work week than that prevailing for similar work in the occupation in that vicinity, "unless the minimum wage established by such order is the highest wage or the maximum work week is the shortest work week that the board is authorized to establish under this act."

Contracts Made Guide.

The third asserted collective bargaining agreements already established in any occupation "shall be prima facie evidence" of appropriate minimum wages and maximum hours to be established by the board.

The committee's first action, as predicted, was to substitute for the House bill under consideration the bill that was passed by the Senate last Saturday. This was done at the motion of Representative Richard J. Welch (Republican), California, and carried by a vote of 14 to 3, indicative of the margin that prevailed throughout the day.

Work was concluded on the bill. The writing of the report remains, and Mrs. Norton promised to have this completed sometime today, although possibly not before midnight.

The measure, fifth wages-hours draft at this session, sticks to the 40-hour work week, 40 cents an hour minimum wage, provisions of the Senate measure.

By voting to substitute that bill for the bill then before the committee, the group killed the drastic amendment of Representative Reuben T. Wood, Democrat, Missouri, which would have empowered the Labor Standards Board to fix minimum wages up to 70 cents an hour and work weeks as low as 35 hours.

It was this section that alarmed

House Cotton Unit Threatens To Block Bills

By William V. Nessly.

A threat to block passage of remaining Administration legislation unless aid is given cotton growers in maintaining the price of their product arose yesterday on the heels of a statement by President Roosevelt that no more Government cotton loans will be made unless a crop-curtailment measure is enacted.

Cotton belt House members, at a caucus, voted to send a committee to the President with a new and urgent plea for the loans, and arguments why such assistance is needed before the scheduled passage of general farm legislation next January.

Should the committee efforts fail, it was declared on many sides, a united front of Representatives from all farm regions will be organized to hold up such Administration measures as the wage and hour, housing and court bills.

New Caucus Planned.

Representative Aaron Lane Ford, (Democrat), Mississippi, who called the caucus, was designated chairman of the committee, with Representative Lyndon Johnson (Democrat), Texas, secretary. Representatives Raven Georgia, Sparkman, Alabama; De Rouen, Louisana, and Terry, Arkansas, arei in the group. The confereince with the President has been set for 11 a. m. today.

The next caucus will include representatives from wheat, corn and all other farm sections.

Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, sponsored the motion to send a committee to the White House to "discuss not only cotton

Rail Head Says They Could Have Sold Him Soap. Wrappers.

By the Associated Press.

The smiling head of America's largest railway system told a Senate investigating committee yesterday that he paid $15,000 for Democratic National Convention books and would have "taken soap wrappers if they had offered them to me."

Robert R. Young, who recently bought control of the 23,000-mile Van Sweringen network, said two solicitors called on him this spring, when two of the system's holding companies were under fire at Washington.

He said he paid them $10,000 and later $5,000 more "because they weren't satisfied."

Acknowledging that he was expecting "an invitation" to appear before the investigating committee about that time, Young insisted that his contributions had "no connection" with his relationships to Federal agencies.

The solictors—one of whom he named as N. M. Lichtblau—wanted donations from Alleghany and Chesapeake corporations, the Van Sweringen system's chief holding companies, Young testified.

"They also wanted something from Pathe and all my other interests," he said, adding:

"I refused to give it to them."

He repeatedly declared that the contributions were "entirely personal," and that there was no question of infringement of the corrupt practices act. He conceded, however, in response to questions that the time of the donation was "unfortunate."

Man Who Claims He's W. E. Corcoran Held in Dope Case

Nogales, Ariz., Aug. 4 (AP).—A man who gave the name of William Eustice Corcoran, and claimed his grandfather founded the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, appeared before United States Commissioner R. L. O'Neill today on a charge of smuggling narcotics across the international boundary from Mexico.

He and a companion were ordered held for the Federal court at Tucson, Ariz., on bonds of $5,000 each. Neither posted bond immediately.

Customs officers said they arrested Corcoran and Don Haverly, Nogales, on information from across the international line. They said they found 4½ ounces of narcotics in a rubber tube above the motor of Corcoran's car.

Mrs. Corcoran recently filed suit for divorce at Canton, Ohio, charging that her husband insisted on remaining in Nogales. She also alleged "gross neglect and extreme cruelty."

Father Stabs Four Children to Death, Slashes His Wife

By the Associated Press.

Mayfield, Ky., Aug. 4.—Still wearing his blood-stained blue shirt, V. J. Morse, 45-year-old World War veteran, confessed today he slashed his wife and slew their four children with a butcher knife at their home near Columbus, Ky., last night.

"I did it," he said, but refused to amplify the remark.

Sheriff H. A. Hicks, who brought Morse to jail here because, he said, the man's neighbors were talking excitedly, quoted Morse as saying after surrendering without resistance:

"I don't know why I did it; just crazy, I guess."

Mrs. Morse, 42, taken to the home of her father for treatment of five knife gashes in her back, said Morse went berserk when she made one of her frequent protests against his treatment of the children.

Peace, It's Wonderful! Democratic Chiefs Call Love Feast to Heal Wounds From Court Brawl

By Robert C. Albright.

This talk about an unbridgable gulf and an incurable rift in the Democratic Party is "the veriest moonshine." Jim Farley said so last night, and he ought to know.

Mr. Farley will bear dove.

And these Senate Democrats who have been "kicking the President in the face," as Jack Garner once put it—why, you've got them all wrong. "You will find each of them valiantly pulling his oar in the party boat."

Jim Farley said so, and he ought to know. Anyway, Senate Democrats are going to throw a party at the Raleigh Hotel next Tuesday night just to show Farley is right. Farley won't be present, but all the Senators will be. And during the evening the President is going to drop in for a look-see.

The whole thing was quietly arranged the other day in the office of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate. Two or three Democratic court plan opponents and Administration stalwarts got together and decided that now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party.

A committee was named, a dinner was arranged and invitations were sent out. The theme of the get-together is to be HARMONY, capitalized, with appropriate words and music. Chief item on the menu is to be one dove of peace, nicely browned, with trimmings.

Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, Senate majority leader, is to be honor guest.

And Vice President John Nance Garner, who returned in the nick of time to grab the court bone from the Senate dog fight is to be toastmaster. You can imagine the rest.

Peace, it's wonderful!

The boys are determined it won't be a repetition of the peace that failed—the late Jefferson Island three-day picnic fiasco. All of the details are being handled with nicety, even to circumspect seating arrangements. No, there won't be any speeches!

Mr. Garner will demand harmony.

If there isn't a slip, it should all go to prove what the Postmaster General was trying to say last night to the Summit County Democratic organization in Akron, Ohio:

"This Administration is concerned with bringing back and perpetuating prosperity—it has no time for vendettas."

Mr. Roosevelt will take a "look-see."

Farley said, and his speech was nationally broadcast, that this talk about Senators being "punished politically for their failure to accept one item in the President's program" was Republican propaganda and a "piece of moonshine."

Some skeptical members of the Senate wanted to take him seriously. One was Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana Democrat, who bolted the Administration to oppose the President's court plan.

Van Nuys announced very simply yesterday he will be a candidate for re-election in 1938. He

Navy Will Ask Two Warships In 1938 Plans

Seeks Cruisers Also to Bring Fleet Up to Maximum.

Two 35,000-ton battleships and two light cruisers are included in the Navy's 1938 construction program, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, announced yesterday. The Bath Iron Works Corporation of Bath, Me., submitted the lowest of six bids for building two 1,500-ton destroyers.

Mechanical defects discovered in the nearly completed aircraft carrier, Yorktown, Admiral Leahy said, probably would keep the ship from joining the fleet on the West Coast for an additional year, although she was due for delivery to the Navy by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., of Newport News, Va., on August 16.

Admiral Leahy declared the Navy Department would ask the next session of Congress to appropriate funds to begin construction on the two battleships and two light cruisers, which have been estimated to cost a total of $150,000,000. The Navy's objective, he said, was to build up to the limit provided by the old London Naval Treaty limitation which expired last year and from that point to follow a continuing program for the replacement of vessels as they become overage.

Carry 16-Inch Guns.

The two new battleships, which will be recommended to Congress next year as well as the two to be laid down this year, are intended to replace the oldest battleships of the fleet.

The destroyers, for which bids were received yesterday, were authorized by Congress in 1930.

Each of the new battleships will carry nine 16-inch guns, and cost approximately $55,000,000. Four years will be required to build them, naval officials said.

Admiral Leahy said the Navy would expect the company which built the Yorktown to replace defective reduction gears and to correct minor mechanical imperfections which were discovered during preliminary trials of the aircraft carrier two weeks ago.

Presumably, he continued, the same corrections will have to be made in the Yorktown's sister ship, the Enterprise, now under construction at Newport News.

Admiral Leahy said the four superdreadnaughts which are to be laid down in the next two years would bring the fleet up to the maximum number of 15 battleships allowed under the old treaty.

The two light cruisers, for which funds will be asked next year, will be of the 7,500 ton class, and will replace overage vessels of the same size, he said.

The bids submitted yesterday by the Bath Iron Works Corporation for the construction of the two 1,500-ton destroyers called for the delivery of one of the ships 30 months after the date of contract at $6,200,000. If contracts for both of the vessels were awarded it, the corporation estimated it could construct the ships for $5,330,000 each.

Analysis of Wagner Housing Bill Substantiates Cause of Treasury Department Headache; New Yorker's Proposal Eventually May Cost Federal Government $1,200,000,000.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

Treasury attaches, as is their business, are primarily interested in the arithmetic of problems. They have hearts, of course, and, being human, they deplore the squalor in which millions of families in this country live. Being businessmen, they also realize that a huge housing program will give a decided impetus to employment and recovery in the durable goods industries.

But, unlike Senator Robert F. Wagner, they do not stop there. They want to know what the program for doing something about this problem will cost. Now that is a difficult answer to find. Senator Wagner constantly has evaded it on the floor of the Senate. Senator David I. Walsh, who is more realistic, ventures a guess. But actually the cost is uncertain because the bill commits the Government to uncertain liabilities over a 60-year period.

If there is anything that a sound and rational financial man abhors it is an uncertain liability. He likes to know, fairly definitely, to what he is being committed, especially when the figures run into hundreds of millions of dollars. All of which explains why the Treasury became critical of the underlying principles of this bill last March and why President Roosevelt expressed opposition in June —and publicly neither has indicated any reversal of opinion.

* * *

The opinion seems widespread on Capitol Hill—due, perhaps to misleading presentation of the subject in the Senate Education and Labor Committee's report—that the Wagner bill entails an appropriation of only $26,000,000 for the next three years, with power to a United States Housing Authority to borrow $700,000,000 to lend to local housing agencies —and that such loans are "self-liquidating."

The committee report says that "the bill provides specifically that all loans shall be repayable in full with interest at not less than the cost of money to the Government" and further on that ultimately these loans "would not represent any charge upon the Federal Treasury or the taxpayer."

These statements may be technically correct—even though that can be disputed—but standing alone, as they do in the report, they are certainly misleading—and that is a gentle word for it. What the report does not make clear, and which few seem to realize, is that the bill first authorizes the Federal Government to lend to local housing agencies $700,000,000. It then authorizes the Federal Government to give these local agencies annually more than enough to pay the interest due on the loans and approximately to amortize the debt in 60 years.

In other words, there is very little practical difference from the mathematical viewpoint between the provisions of this bill and a proposal for the Federal Government to build $700,000,000 of low-cost housing over the next three years and make an outright gift of such construction to local agencies in various parts of the country.

Of course, if that were done, there would be a great outcry because, in the first place, the $700,000,000 thus expended would figure in the budget for the next three years. Secondly, it would be contended that the local governments should make some contribution toward building such housing. The prevalent idea at the moment in this Administration seems to be to use any subterfuge to prevent expenditures from figuring in the budget.

It is to be naive and to deal in fictions, however, to contend that we are not doing the same thing under the Wagner bill. Instead of adding the $700,000,000 to the budget within three years, we are spreading it over 60 years. But the Treasury will be responsible for paying such a sum—since it is a guaranteed debt of the Treasury—and for practical purposes it is an addition to the public debt to be liquidated by appropriations over 60 years. It all boils down to a matter of bookkeeping.

Thus is appears that the best guess as to the cost involved in the Wagner bill is $1,200,000,000, or 60 times the $20,000,000 maximum allowed each year for a subsidy in the form of annual contributions. But, it is said, this is taking advantage of the maximum allowances of the bill—that able and efficient management of the program may hold the actual outlay substantially below that figure.

This is very doubtful because of the difficulty of providing decent housing for the "lowest income groups." Indeed, it is very probable that due to the cost of such housing and the small incomes of those intended to be benefited that the annual contribution will have to be boosted above $20,000,000 annually, if the program is to achieve its primary objective.

Moreover, to assert that the managers of the program may not do all that Congress has authorized them to do is to set up a government of men instead of one of laws—and that alone is a subject of proper criticism. If authority is not intended by Congress to be exercised, it should not be used. But in all events, it is conceivable that the ultimate cost to the Treasury of this modest housing program—it contemplates only 175,000 family units—may cost only about $1,000,000,000.

But it also may cost the Treasury more than the $1,200,000,000 computed by multiplying $20,000,000 annually by 60. The proposed housing authority, due to technical phraseology in the bill, may find that it has to pay more for the money it borrows than the local agencies to which such money is loaned will be required to pay.

The report states that the proposed housing authority would lend money at "not less than the cost of money to the Government." Senator Wagner on the Senate floor has made a similar statement. But that is not what the bill provides. The bill as amended in the Senate provides that "such loans shall bear interest at such rate not less than the going Federal rate at the time the loan is made plus one-half of one per centum."

The key words in that phrase are "the going Federal rate," which is defined by the bill to mean "at any time, the annual rate of interest specified in the then most recently issued bonds of the Federal Government having a maturity of ten years or more."

Treasury officials do not regard bonds issued by the FCA and the HOLC as "bonds of the Federal Government." They regard them as indirect or guaranteed obligations of the Treasury. The bonds to be issued by the proposed United States Housing Authority presumably would fall into the same classification.

Thus "bonds of the Federal Government" are regarded as the direct obligations of the Treasury, and the rate of interest attaching to them may be different from that attaching to proposed housing authority bonds. In that event, we would have the housing authority borrowing money at one rate while a different rate would be the criterion for leading it.

For instance, the last issue of Federal bonds, falling within the definition contained in this bill, had an interest rate of 2½ per cent. It is entirely possible the Treasury may not have another long-term bond issue for six months. On the other hand, the new housing authority may come into existence next month and in October issue a $50,000,000 bond issue to get things started. If the maturity of such an issue is 60 years hence, it undoubtedly would have to bear an interest rate in excess of 2½ per cent. Even if the maturity were for a shorter period, in all probability it would have to carry an interest rate of better than 2½ per cent to be attractive to investors.

But whether the issue carried an interest rate of 3 or 3½ per cent, the housing authority could lend such money at a rate of not less than 2½ per cent (the rate attaching to the last Treasury issue) plus one-half of 1 per cent (which is intended to cover administrative costs), or 3 per cent.

In this way the housing authority 20 or 30 years hence may find it needs an appropriation to make up an interest deficiency—and 1 per cent on $100,000,000 is $1,000,000 annually. Over 60 years with a $700,000,000 program involved, that may run into real money.

Thus it is no wonder certain Treasury officials have the jitters over the housing bill. They, too, have heard that "if wishes were horses, all beggars would ride." But they know wishes are not horses—and they also know housing programs cost money.

Palestine Split Merits Study, Zionists Told

By the Associated Press.

Zurich, Switzerland, Aug. 4.—The World Zionist Congress tonight debated the proposed partition of Palestine, which Zionist President Chaim Weizmann termed the gravest responsibility faced "by any generation of Jews for nearly 19 centuries."

"We face the hour of decision," declared Weizmann as the congress opened discussion of the British Royal Commission's proposal to split Palestine into a Jewish state, an Arab state and a small mandated territory.

The congress chose Menahem Ussishkin, of Jerusalem, as its new president and named Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York City, one of eight vice presidents.

Weizmann urged Zionists interested in the development of Palestine as a Jewish national home to consider partition even though "the proposal as it now stands is not acceptable."

"The British government itself has not insisted on the present form," the Zionist leader asserted. "However, the idea embodied in the recommendation of the royal commission should receive earnest consideration."

Weizmann said the plan envisaged room for settlement of 2,000,000 Jews from eastern and central Europe within the proposed Jewish state in "a reasonable period."

He criticized the present Palestine administration for putting into effect one of the Royal Commission's recommendations in regard to immigration without waiting for "further developments" after the report was presented. Weizmann referred to the limit of 1,000 Jewish immigrants a month, which was imposed by the Palestine government for the next eight months.

The Royal Commission, headed by Lord Peel, was appointed last year by former King Edward VIII after Arab protests against Jewish immigration resulted in bloody rioting throughout the Holy Land.

Unwed 'Kidnapers' Took Own Child, Mrs. Horst Admits

Both 'Mothers' Plead to Keep 2-Yr.-Old Boy

Court Fight Expected on Custody as Weird Tale of Birth Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Swift solution of the weird "kidnaping" of 30-month-old Donald Horst precipitater a struggle for his custody today.

On one side were John Regan and Lydia Nelson, who admitted snatching the youngster from the arms of Mrs. Otto Horst last night, but contended he was their child, born out of wedlock.

On the other was Mrs. Horst, who told Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley she was not the real mother of the lad but gained possession of him shortly after his birth.

The dramatic denoument came after officials brought the two women face to face in the prosecutor's office.

"I am going to ask the Regans to let us keep Donald," Mrs. Horst sobbed. "We love the boy as much as any parents could."

But the unwed Regans insisted they be allowed to keep the baby.

Donald, he told them, would be placed in an orphanage pending a decision on his custody in the civil courts.

Both women wept.

Crowley said he believed the Regans were the "natural parents" of Donald, but commented the Horsts had given him "excellent care" since they obtained him in a manner designed to give "neighbors" the impression he was their real child.

All were released.

Crowley and Capt. Daniel Gilbert, of the State's atorney's police, linked this chain of events after the Regans ended a 16-hour hunt for the child by surrendering and disclosing he was at their home.

Donald was born to Miss Nelson January 6, 1935, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ewert. Ewert performed odd jobs for Dr. John Anthony Rose, the attending physician.

Miss Nelson agreed to let the doctor arrange to place the infant with a "wealthy man" who wanted a child, but, believing it would be only temporary, signed no papers. The boy was taken away 15 minutes after his birth.

About that time, Horst brought Mrs. Horst to the home of Mrs. Josephine Triolo.

"Ewert came there and told Mrs. Triolo to telephone for a doctor," Crowley said Mrs. Triolo told him. "Mrs. Triolo was gone for about 15 minutes. When she returned, she saw the baby."

Crowley said a birth certificate, purporting to show the Horsts were the parents, was filed.

"Mrs. Horst didn't recall on what day the baby was born," the assistant prosecutor said. "Mrs. Regan said 'Sunday' right away."

Crowley said Miss Nelson, 25, told him she was the common-law wife of Regan, 26-year-old machinist, and that they never married because she had not been divorced from a man named Lavin.

"I tried for over two years to find the baby," Crowley quoted her, "but it wasn't until 10 days ago that Ewert told me the Horsts had him."

"John and I knew it would be hopeless to ask the Horsts to give up the baby, so we decided just to take him. We didn't think Mrs. Horst would make a fuss, knowing the circumstances of the child's birth."

10 Hurt as Rival Auto Unionists Riot in Detroit; Wide Truck Strike in Philadelphia Collapses

U.A.W.-Independent Clash Forces Chrysler Plant to Shut Down.

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 4.—Smoldering antagonism between the United Automobile Workers and the Independent Association of Chrysler Employes flared into violence this afternoon at the Plymouth Motor Co. plant, and ten men were injured before the plant was closed.

Events preceding the shutdown included the beating of two officials of the Independent Association at noon, dismissal by the plant of four members of the U. A. W., a second outbreak of fighting, and a riot call for police.

Shortly after 2 p. m. the management closed the plant until 7 a. m. tomorrow. A company spokesman said a strike in a key department necessitated the shutdown. He called the incident a "serious violation" by the U. A. W. of its contract with the corporation.

Rescue Independents.

Inspector Gustave C. Schink, heading a police detail which responded to the riot call, said his men rescued a group of members of the Independent Association who had locked themselves in a room within the plant while U. A. W. members attempted to batter down the door.

Three of the injured men were taken to hospitals. Seven men, one of them stabbed in the chest, were treated at the plant hospital.

A conference of union and company representatives was in progress tonight. The U. A. W. was demanding reinstatement of the four discharged men.

The Independent Association was incorporated July 22. It was organized avowedly as a rival to the U. A. W. and claims 26,000 members among the 60,000 Chrysler employes. U. A. W. leaders disputing its claim have charged it is a "company union."

Philadelphia Strike Halted.

Philadelphia, Aug. 4 (AP).—The city-wide truck strike, involving more than one-third of the drivers in Philadelphia, came to a sudden end today except for the companies under contract to haul merchandise for the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.

The end came five hours after Mayor S. Davis Wilson issued a proclamation a "state of emergency" existed and that he would use drastic measures to put down disorder.

The strike was called in support of a smaller strike—to unionize trucking companies under contract to haul merchandise for the A. & P. Efforts were being made tonight to settle the A. & P. walkout.

The mayor's proclamation was issued after there had been widespread acts of violence. In different parts of the city trucks were overturned, taxicabs set on fire, drivers pulled from their vehicles and in many cases beaten.

The strike had affected industries not involved in the trouble, and thousands of workers were forced into idleness. The Philco Radio & Television Corporation sent 8,000 workers home because its hauling facilities had been interfered with due to threats against drivers. The Quaker Lace Co., employing 1,000 persons, shut down and other concerns were preparing to do likewise.

Raids Destroy Master Ring of Counterfeiters

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 4.—Secret Service agents today completed a round-up of seven men and a woman they said were responsible for half the counterfeit money being circulated in the country.

Capt. William H. Houghton said the group supplied bogus money to operators in Baltimore, Kansas City, Cleveland and other cities and to sailors who passed the bills to American tourists abroad.

The arrests climaxed four months of investigation by a West Coast Secret Service agent who came here posing as a fugitive from justice and wormed is way into the confidence of the ring, telling them he sent counterfeit money to a girl friend out West to dispose of.

The first raid was made Saturday on a West Forty-sixth street flat which Houghton said yielded $17,000 in counterfeit money.

Agents Sunday seized a man who allegedly received a consignment of 99 spurious $10 bills to sell to sailors and three more persons were arrested the next day when they called at his home.

Houghton said the arrests disclosed evidence that the group had connections with the narcotics and vice rackets, including one file of 1,000 prospective customers for "party girls," in Philadelphia, Passaic, N. J., and on Long Island.

Sloan Ranked Highest-Paid U. S. Executive

By the Associated Press.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, ranked yesterday as the highest executive in 1936 among corporations reporting to the Securities Commission. He was paid $561,311, including a $411,161 bonus.

The only Hearst salary listed is $500,000 from Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., but securities officials said he may have received other paychecks from the score of other corporations that make up his newspaper, magazine, real estate and mining empire.

Among the few large corporations which do not have to report to the SEC is the Ford Motor Co., because its securities are not traded on a national securities exchange.

In other companies, actors usually drew more than executives, including: Warner Baxter, $284,384; Gary Cooper, $265,454; George Raft, $202,666; Kay Francis, $227,500; Joe E. Brown, $201,562; Leslie Howard, $185,000; Ronald Colman, $162,500, and Irene Dunne, $102,777.

Motion picture directors and producers also stood high on the salary list. Darryl F. Zanuck was listed at $260,000, Roy Del Ruth at $238,333, Frank Capra at $208,000 and Wesley Ruggles at $188,808.

Many a business executive shared pay raises given employes of many companies last year. Sloan's pay, for instance, was about $190,000 more than in 1935.

Other Boosts Listed.

Some of the other conspicuous increases included F. B. Davis, jr., president of United States Rubber Co., from $125,220 to $227,260; Gerard Swope and Owen D. Young, president and chairman of General Electric Corporation, respectively, each from $96,000 to $146,500; L. B. McKitterick, president of Philip Morris & Co., from $101,360 to $143,699, and H. W. Phelps, chairman of the American Can Co., from $126,800 to $152,100..

Pay cuts, usually due to elimination or reduction in bonuses, also appeared on the list. Chairman Charles M. Schwab, of Bethlehem Steel, for instance, was listed at $203,332 in 1935 and $180,000 in 1936.

Cummings Studies Gas Pegging Angle

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday Federal agents are investigating a number of large oil companies in the East to determine whether they are violating the Sherman antitrust act.

In making the statement to press conference, Cummings declined to divulge the exact nature of the charges under consideration but said they "very likely" would include a charge of conspiring to "peg" gasoline prices throughout the East

The investigation, he said, has been under way a month. Antitrust charges now are pending against more than two score oil companies and individuals at Madison, Wis.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys.

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Treasury Reports Smuggling Decline

By the Associated Press.

Counterfeiting and smuggling are on the decline, the Treasury said yesterday, but check forging is increasing.

Counterfeit notes turned over to the Secret Service by "innocent takers" totaled only $487,643 during the fiscal year ended July 1. This was one-third under the previous year's total.

Arrests for making or passing counterfeit notes or coins totaled 1,247 last year, a decrease of 339. Arrests for check forgeries, however, increased from 879 in 1935-36 to 1,215 last year.

The Customs Bureau reported 9,800 seizures of smuggled goods for the 11 months ended May 31, compared with 13,856 in the corresponding period a year ago. Liquor seizures fell off from 3,036 to 2,260.

Coast Guard seizures during the last fiscal year were valued at only $13,557, compared with $282,181 in the previous year. Liquor seizures stood at $2,176 and $176,890, respectively.

Fighting Slows, Peasants Return as Rebels 'Mop Up' in Eastern Spain

Franco Seeks To Consolidate Drive for Road

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 4.—Peasants in the war-torn mountains of eastern Spain slowly filtered back to their villages tonight from forest refuges.

Insurgent dispatches said fighting in the Albarracin section of the Teruel front had waned as both sides took respite after three weeks of steady battle.

Insurgent Generalissimo Franco's command was occupied with mop-up operations and establishment of food and supply centers for inhabitants of the vast wedge they have driven southward toward the Valencia-Madrid highway.

In the Valdecuenca sector, south of Albarracin and west of Teruel, insurgents announced they occupied positions dominating the Cuenca and Valencia valleys after artillery and aviation pounded the government lines.

On the northern Asturian front, insurgent dispatches said, government forces were routed, "almost without opposition" in a surprise attack on the coastal highlands between Santander and Oviedo.

Other insurgent dispatches indicated the government salient west of Madrid had been pressed back from Villanueva de la Canada, about 15 miles west of Madrid.

Pope Withholds Recognition.

Vatican City, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Holy See's relations with the Spanish insurgent regime remain unchanged, a semi-official Vatican statement said today, despite a Salamanca announcement Pope Pius XI had granted it formal recognition.

Confer on Neutral Deadlock.

Reich Backs Italo-British Pact.

Berlin, Aug. 4 (AP).—Germany is encouraging efforts by Great Britain and Italy to smooth out their differences, a foreign office spokesman said tonight.

His statement came while some persons were expressing the opinion Germany might be the loser in any Italo-British understanding growing out of a recent exchange of "friendship" letters between British Premier Neville Chamberlain and Mussolini.

He denied British newspaper reports Il Duce, fearing England might attack Italy, had tried unsuccessfully for a German pledge of support in such an event.

Hoover Asks Voters To Support Foes of Court Plan at Polls

Los Angeles, Aug. 4 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover recommended, in a letter made public today, that support be given in the 1938 elections to national legislators, Republican or Democratic, who have "actively attacked" President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan.

He also proposed demands be made upon all Senate and House candidates for expression of their views on the plan.

"This issue will not be settled," he wrote, "if candidates are to be subjected to political reprisals on this issue, or until it is certain that it cannot be claimed from this election that the electorate supports packing of the court.

"You should continue to stand on guard," he concluded the letter to Executive Director Dorothy M. Arnold, of Southern California headquarters of the League for Supreme Court Independence, Inc.

Buchanan Community Center Girls Make Bright Hooked Rugs Out of Meal Sacks, Old Dresses in Summer Handcraft Program

Basketry and Needlework Also Taught By Supervisor.

Children at the Buchanan Community Center, Thirteenth and D streets southeast, have discovered one of the more novel uses of adversity. They don't have much money to spend on equipment, but their supervisor, Mrs. H. C. Olson, has plenty of ingenuity and a mother up in Canada who makes hooked rugs.

Mrs. Olson's mother sent down some hooks. Mrs. Olson collected some discarded meal sacks and old dresses. And the children are now turning out strictly hand-made, old-fashioned hooked rugs that would brighten up any home.

They tack a meal sack on a window screen frame, gather around it in groups of 5 or 6 and hook away at a great rate. When the summer is over, the rugs will go to the girls who have worked most industriously.

The rugs are just one part of the center's handcraft program, which also includes basketry and needlework. On the art side, the most popular diversion is mask-making. Huge faces are modeled out of clay and paper molds cast from them. The molds are then painted with grotesque faces. Come Halloween, the artists expect to be more than repaid for their efforts by frightening the entire southeast section.

The 500 children, 6 to 18 years old, who attend the center daily are also music fans and have formed a gazoo band. Fortunately for the peace and quiet of the neighborhood, however, they do not play often.

Athletic facilities of the center include fencing foils, ping pong tables, chess and checker boards, tumbling mats, a badminton court and a softball diamond. Mornings the younger children are driven to the Anacostia swimming pool. Proof of the patrons' enthusiasm for the center is the fact that every day at 5 p. m., closing time, Mrs. Olson has to chase them out of the building.

Pauline Downing, 10; Lorraine Sisson, 11, and Laverna Colson, 8, are hooked-rug enthusiasts, and all they need is a window screen frame, a meal sack and strips cut from old clothes.

Elkins, W. Va., Aug. 4 (AP).—Non-striking homesteaders called today for the "orderly and lawful" ejection of Robert Z. Willson, leader of the week-old strike at the Tygart homestead, who charged "inefficiency and mismanagement."

Clinton I. Heckert, secretary of the 59 homesteaders who oppose the 98 strikers, said a resolution was forwarded to acting Resettlement Administrator Milo Perkins, asserting Willson had attempted to "foment dissatisfaction" among the homesteaders for the last year.

Inquiry Hears Painters' Row, Weighs Verdict

Union and Contractors Seek Interpretation of Bacon-Davis Act.

The Labor Department late yesterday had under advisement the dispute of union painters, the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department and the contracting firms of Coons & Raptis, of Brooklyn, and William Wilson, of Atlanta.

Behind the scenes lurked the desire of union officials and union contractors, among the greatest in the Nation, to obtain an interpretation of the Bacon-Davis act that would make it compulsory that wage rates for overtime be included in contracts let by the Government and private interests.

Testimony centered principally about the Coons & Raptis policy of employing non-union labor, which, the painters insist, was not paid the overtime scale demanded by the union.

A further charge that laborers were used on painters' jobs at the City Post Office was admitted by the representative of the Brooklyn firm, its superintendent here, Alexander Picoult.

If the department finds the Bacon-Davis act has been violated by Coons & Raptis and the William Wilson firm, it probably will rule that laborers employed on painting jobs shall be paid the full $1.51 1-7 an hour, retroactive from the time they took their jobs, and that regular painters who worked overtime should get time-and-a-half for their work.

Under cross-examination by Harry Wender, attorney for the Painters' Union, and Bryce P. Holcombe, its business manager, Picoult admitted his firm employed 23 painters and seven laborers to help them, and that no overtime was paid for work on Saturday or over the specified seven-hour day.

The Wilson company was not represented.

One of the principal union witnesses was the caustic William Gallagher, national representative of the International Painters Union here, who told of the laws governing the painting trade.

Throat Infection Of Emilie Dionne Clearing Rapidly

Callander, Ont., Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—Emilie, of the Dionne quintuplet troupe, was convalescent tonight.

A respiratory infection, sore throat, was diminishing rapidly. In fact, it didn't bother Emilie at all. But she was perturbed that Dr. A. R. Dafoe ordered her kept apart from her four sisters for the rest of the week.

Her illness is the first among the quints in more than two years—Emilie had a head cold in 1935 and her sisters contracted it. Their only serious illness, however, since the battle for life after birth on May 28, 1934, was an intestinal ailment in September of that year. Their lives were endangered for a time, then, but the crisis was over in two weeks.

Sugar Bill Veto Threatened on Eve of Debate

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt last night informed House sugar bloc leaders he would veto proposed sugar marketing legislation if it retained present restrictions on Hawaiian and Puerto Rican refining operations, the United Press learned.

House debate on the bill, stalemated for five months by a bitter controversy between certain Cabinet members and Congressional sugar bloc leaders, is scheduled to open today.

The way was cleared for a showdown fight on the floor yesterday when the House rules committee granted a rule to bring the bill out for debate.

Sugar bloc plans to rush the bill through the House tomorrow in its present form were "stymied" by the President's decision.

It was reported authoritatively the President telephoned Chairman Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture committee, that he considered the present draft discriminatory against American citizens in the islands, and therefore would veto it.

SEC Stock Charges Denied by N.Y.Man

By the Associated Press.

Martin Gilbert, of New York denied yesterday Securities Commission allegations he was only a figurehead underwriter of stock issued by the Trenton Valley Distillers Corporation, of Detroit, last year.

Gilbert was the first witness in a proceeding to determine whether further sale of the securities because of alleged inaccuracies and omissions in the registration statement filed with the commission on January 27, 1936.

The witness acknowledged this was his first and only underwriting experience, that he did not have the cash to pay for any substantial stocks of the securities before selling them to the public and he was forced into involuntary bankruptcy a few months later.

Republicans Voice Guiding Principles

New York, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—The national affairs committee of the National Republican Committee was on record today with a statement of principles for guidance of the party, including condemnation of what it called the "doctrines of Karl Marx and of Moscow now being encouraged in this country by the New Deal."

A resolution, embracing a program for the party and practices which it disapproves, was adopted by the committee meeting last night.

"For the first time in our history," the statement said, "we have witnessed attempts against the Constitution, against our form of government and against the very integrity of the Nation, each led by the President of the United States.

"We have seen class consciousness created and aroused; capital and labor which should be co-operative (and largely have been) openly arrayed as antagonists, until, in some of our greatest States virtual civil war arose and the resulting unrest pervades the whole country. We are seeing the doctrines of Karl Marx and of the Second and Third International put into effect by those from the President down, whose acts belie their words."

5-Cent Raise In Pay Settles Rail Troubles

Non-Operating Workers' Union Demands Are Mediated.

By the Associated Press.

The National Mediation Board announced last night settlement of a controversy resulting from a wage increase demand by 14 nonoperating Brotherhoods of Railroad Workers.

Otto S. Beyer of the board said the settlement provided for a basic wage increase of 5 cents per hour, effective August 1. The crafts had demanded an increase of 20 cents per hour in their basic rates of pay. Beyer said that the settlement provided an average of 8½ to 8¾ per cent increase per hour.

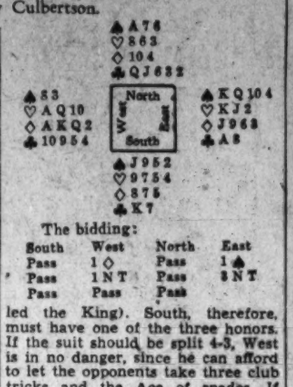
The settlement covers 750,000 to 800,000 rail employes in the nonoperating crafts. On a basis of 1936 operations, the board said, the increase would amount to approximately $98,000,000 annually for class 1 railways.

The agreement is subject to ratification by the general chairman of the brotherhoods involved, but Beyer said this was simply a formality. Proceedings in the controversy were instituted on July 16.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

The discussion of the hold-up play, suggested by a correspondent earlier in the week, would not be complete without an example situation in which the hold-up play is not correct. One situation, easy enough to understand without a sample hand, is when refusal to win the first trick would enable the opponents to shift to an even more dangerous suit. Another situation occurs when the suit led by the opponents is blocked, in which case the hold-up would permit them to unblock the suit. The classic example of this is Hand No. 3 in the recent World Bridge Olympic. (As many bridge players are aware, the World Bridge Olympic is a set of 16 hands, prepared by world famous analysts, to be played simultaneously all over the world on a given night. Hundreds of thousands of bridge players have found these hands not only entertaining, but also instructive.)



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	1 N T	Pass	3 N T
Pass	Pass	Pass

South, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding recommended by the committee is very normal. Any good pair would get to three notrump, possessing as they do most of the top cards in the deck, without, however, a good major suit.

North's normal opening lead is the three of clubs and West, the declarer, should not hold up. Dummy's Ace should be played at once!

North's failure to lead an honor establishes the fact that his clubs were not headed by the King-Queen and Jack (otherwise he would have led the King). South, therefore, must have one of the three honors. If the suit should be split 4-3, West is in no danger, since he can afford to let the opponents take three club tricks and the Ace of spades. If South should have only two clubs, dummy's play of the Ace is necessary to block the suit. Then West can go about setting up a spade trick and the opponents wil be helpless. If the South has retained his King of clubs he must win the second club trick and cannot put North back into the lead; if South attempts to wriggle out by dropping the King of clubs under dummy's Ace, West will win a second club trick.

Note that the contract will be defeated if dummy's Ace of clubs is not played at the first trick.

Why Firestone STANDARD TIRES are EXTRA SAFE

TAPPING RUBBER TREES ON FIRESTONE PLANTATIONS IN LIBERIA

From these vast plantations comes an ever-increasing supply of the world's finest rubber. Firestone economies in producing raw materials, manufacturing and distribution make it possible for Firestone to give you so much more for your money.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—eight extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. By this process every fiber in every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber. This counteracts dangerous internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

Firestone Standard Tires give you all these extra value features because they are first-quality tires built with high-grade materials and patented construction features. You SAVE MONEY because you buy this high quality and extra value at such low prices.

Before leaving on your vacation trip, join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires—today's top tire value.

Silver Scandal Charges Cause Row in Senate

Townsend Asks Inquiry Into Reported Profits by New Dealers.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Townsend (Republican, Delaware) asked an investigation of "scandalous charges" concerning the Administration's silver program and started a fight on Capitol Hill yesterday.

Townsend declared the "whole silver situation" is enveloped in "a fog of mystery and suspicion." Senator Pittman (Democrat, Nevada) challenged his assertions.

All the charges, Pittman said, were "entirely refuted' before a Senate committee which investigated the Treasury's operation of the silver purchase act.

Townsend declared the "charges and rumors" range from "collusive relationships between international silver speculators and officials of our government" to allegations that the Treasury permitted silver holders to escape taxes on speculative profits.

Wishes Act Repealed.

"The people are entitled to know," he said, "what truth there is in the charge that many persons prominently identified with the New Deal as officials, advisers and contributors to the Democratic national campaign funds, made enormous profits speculating in silver with advance notice of the Administrations program."

The silver act, which Townsend wishes repealed, calls for the purchase of silver until it is one-fourth of the nation's monetary base, or until its price reaches $1.29 an ounce.

James R. H. Cromwell, whose wife is Doris Duke of the tobacco millions, told the Senate Agriculture Committee during the day the Federal Reserve Board should make free grants of cedit for "synchronizing the flow of money with the flow of goods."

The socialite and financial author of Sunnybrook, N. J., appeared as a witness in hearings on establishing a monetary authority for the stabilization of currencies.

"I have just returned from a tour of Russia, Italy and Germany," he said, "and I find nothing good in regimentation. That is not the answer to problems in this country. What we need here is to synchronize the flow of money and goods so as to increase production and raise wages.

Leon for Management.

"The board of governors of the Federal Reserve System should become a bank of issue, making grants to Congress through the Treasury for injection into the consumption side of our economy."

Shortly before, Rene Leon, foreign exchange specialist, told the committee "We must have an international system of money, or revert to the dark ages."

Leon urged that the United States divorce the dollar from gold as a means of forcing a new international currency agreement.

To bring about "an international system of money he proposed.

1. "Claim and practice the same freedom" in monetary management as other nations.

2. Divorce our dollar from gold "as the pound sterling is divorced from gold."

3. Manage our dollar as others manage their currencies.

4. Lock up our gold and silver and pass to others the risk of exchange.

eral women against whom Police Captain Thomas Connolly said he would seek warrants in municipal court tomorrow.

Approved by Medical Group.

Birth control was recognized as a proper medical practice by the American Medical Association at its Atlantic City convention in June, when a unanimous vote of the association's house of delegates, governing body of American medicine, ended completely a 25-year-long opposition to contraceptives. Later a minority group within the association's membership bitterly attacked the action.

Greek 'Quiet' Hailed.

Very Tired of Regimentation

James H. R. Cromwell, husband of Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, appears slightly bored at the hearing of the Senate Agriculture Committee on the establishment of a monetary authority for currency stabilization. He argued the Federal Reserve Board should make free grants of credit for "synchronizing the flow of money with the flow of goods," and assailed regimentation as found in Russia, Italy and Germany, which he recently toured.

Later he declared that if the loans still were withheld, an effort would be made, when a rule is requested for floor consideration of the wage and hour bill, to attach to it mandatory provisions to guarantee farmers parity prices for their products. Parity prices, as established by the Department of Agriculture are designed to correspond to the returns from prices in the five years from 1909 to 1914. For cotton the figure has been set at 16 cents. Cotton was selling yesterday between 10 and 11 cents.

Dies declared that if these moves failed there would be a united front of farm area Congressmen to block other legislation until their point was won.

Among others in the cotton bloc, there even was talk of efforts to hold Congress in session until a general farm program could be enacted, although such a measure previously had been dropped from the list of those to be considered at this session. House and Senate Agriculture committees since have planned to have such legislation in shape for quick action at the January session.

Members of the bloc committee were said to be ready to argue before the President that a crop curtailment law, even if enacted at once, would have no effect on the current huge cotton crop, but loans would be required to prevent disaster to many growers from the falling prices.

Resumption of 12-cent loans could hold off the market at present, it was argued, much of this year's surplus, which could be sold later when crop control has been restored and the price stabilized.

Power Is Stressed.

Dies said that Southerners on the House Rules Committee could block other legislation if the loans were not granted. Representative Massingale (Democrat), Oklahoma, speaking at the caucus, urged such action unless the Administration "does something for the farmer."

Representative Tarver told the caucus he felt "there is nothing that any committee can do to change the President's mind." He said the chance for relief would be to authorize the President to use a part of the money now diverted to farm purposes from tariff receipts, for agricultural subsidies.

Meanwhile, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, said he would call a meeting today of that State's Congressional delegation to ask the Administration for legislation that would guarantee producers 12 cents a pound. He said authorization for loans at the world price would be asked, with an adjustment out of soil conservation funds to complying farmers, sufficient to bring the total received by the producer to 12 cents. He said virtually all producers have complied with the soil conservation act.

President Roosevelt told his press conference Tuesday that to continue the cotton loans would be like buying out of a bottomless sack unless provision were made to curtail the crop. He said advancing money while surpluses continued to grow would break the Treasury.

Indication of the continuing uncertainty as to the size of crops came yesterday when the Weather Bureau reported "development of droughty conditions over considerable areas."

Another development affecting the cotton situation was an Agriculture Department report that the Brazil crop was estimated now at 1,005,000 bales of 478 pounds, which was 2 per cent greater than the corresponding estimate of 812,000 bales last year, which later was reduced to 644,000 bales.

Caldwell, Idaho, Aug. 4.—Prosperous years ahead for the American farmer were visualized here today by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

The Secretary told a southwestern Idaho dairymen's co-operative meeting that "the farmers' share of the national income has risen approximately 3 per cent"—and it's still rising.

"The low mark was 7 per cent," Wallace said. "Now it is 10."

He praised the soil conservation act as "a very unusual and beneficial contribution," and added:

"With the support of the American farmer, the National Administration can and will complete some additional major contributions to the more permanent economic stability of agriculture.

"If different agricultural regions recognize the essential unity of their interests, if the great groups of farmers stand together in support of sound farm policies and if we all seek to harmonize agricultural welfare with national welfare the hope of a sound farm program is bright."

Senate Limits Housing Units To $4,000 Cost

to three years. The George amendment was defeated, 47 to 33.

Byrd Launches Battle.

The Byrd amendment, fixing a $4,000 limitation on cost of each family housing unit, was modified by the Virginian to exempt the actual cost of the land and the cost of demolishing old slums.

Aroused when Wagner refused to accept his amendment, Byrd launched a violent attack on Resettlement's housing "waste and extravagance," and warned against repetition. He leveled repeated shafts at "Tugwelltown," the Greenbelt project near Washington, charging it cost $16,182 per housing unit.

"Such a willful waste of money has never been seen in any civilized country," said the Virginian.

"They tell us we are safeguarding this money by giving the President power to approve contracts. Well, we had the same provision covering Resettlement. What good did it do?"

Byrd said the average cost of all homes is only $4,500, "and I built one the other day, with all modern equipment, for $2,000. I tell you $4,000 is enough."

Tydings Joins Virginian.

Wagner said costs in New York range around $1,500 and $1,600 a room, but when Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, suggested a $1,600-a-room limitation, Wagner said it might bar construction in some communities.

Senator Tydings also swung to support of the Byrd amendment, after Wagner refused to accept an amendment by the Marylander requiring local housing authorities to make a showing that their low-cost housing projects would yield 3 per cent. Wagner had argued that loans to municipalities were not a gift, but would be repaid.

"I think I can prove instantly that they will not pay the obligation," said Tydings. "If it cost $1,500 a room and there are four rooms, that makes $6,000, and 10 per cent of $6,000 is $600, and $600 divided into 12 monthly payments amounts to practically $50 a month. None of these low-income groups can pay $50 a month. That is just plain arithmetic."

"State Socialism" Feared.

Wagner pointed out tha Federal subsidies provided in the bill would reduce the rent to a level tenants could pay. Tydings replied that the subsidies would be used "to repay the Government the interest and the sinking fund of the loan, and it is our money that the municipality pays back to us."

"For heaven's sake," said Tydings, "if the finished product cannot earn at least enough to pay the interest on the Government loan, how in the name of common sense is it going to furnish itself revenue to amortize $700,000,000?"

Both King and Tydings proposed that local authorities be required to put up 25 per cent of the proposed housing contributions. George, in vainly urging a three-year limitation on the act, warned that "unless you do it, you will have State socialism, now and forever."

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, sought and obtained assurances from Wagner that the District of Columbia would share with the States in the proposed housing program.

Father, Daughter in Happy Reunion

Father Regains Child He Lost in Fight With Wife

Doris Anderson, 2½, won her first courtroom battle yesterday when Justice James M. Proctor of District Court held that her father was a more natural guardian for her than the Receiving Home for Children. She has been released from the home, to which she was taken last week from her residence in nearby Maryland. In court with her yesterday was Susie, the rag-doll which is her constant companion.

Doris is on the side of her father, Harry L. Anderson, in the two-way battle he is waging with her mother, Dorothy Anderson, as to which shall have her. According to the attorneys, the father obtained the child in California and brought her here. He has kept her with him since and now is able to provide a suitable home for her, his lawyers said.

His estranged wife, who is flying here from California to regain the child, contends she was awarded custody of Doris by courts there. She asked that Anderson be held here as a fugitive from justice. He is on bond on that charge and will have a hearing this week.

Teacher Accused Of Kidnaping Will Get Hearing Today

Mrs. Marion W. Campbell, Washintgon high school teacher, charged with abduction of a 20-month-old Beltsville, Md., child, will be given a preliminary hearing today at 2 p. m. before Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips at Berwyn, Md.

Mrs. Campbell is alleged to have seized Phillip Shane from in front of his home July 19 and driven off with him in her car. She was arrested by State police a half-hour later at Berwyn, 2 miles south of the Shane home.

said, can aid this situation by agreeing to co-operate with police and warn their drivers.

So-called "danger spots" throughout the city, Van Duzer told the meeting, are being studied and remedies are being applied.

Also attending yesterday's meeting were Capt. Milton D. Smith, Inspector Edward J. Kelly, Capt. Richard Mansfield, Commissioner Daniel Sultan, Inspector B. A. Lamb, former traffic supervisor; Inspector James Beckett, Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge and captains and lieutenants of the various precincts.

Funeral services for the Levy child will be held at 11 a. m. today in the Danzansky funeral home, at 3501 Fourteenth street northwest.

Canadian Textile Mills Close to Thwart Union

Montreal, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—Dominion Textile Co., Ltd., tonight ordered a shutdown of its nine mills. Managing Director Blair Gordon said they would remain idle "until Christmas" before the company would grant demands of the National Catholic Federation of Textile Workers.

The federation called a strike of nearly 10,000 workers of the Dominion company's plants last Monday. The union demands collective bargaining, increased wages, shorter hours and improved working conditions.

Parents of Md. Girl Testify In 'Attack' Trial of Doctor

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 4.—The trial of Dr. Armen Greenhut, 39-year-old physician accused of criminally attacking a 13-year-old girl, entered its first night session tonight, after the girl's father, her motner and a cousin had taken the witness stand.

Dr. Greenhut, a graduate of European medical schools and a former instructor at the University of Pennsylvania, heard stocky William McGowan, a steel worker for 18 years, testify he accompanied police to Dr. Greenhut's office on the night of the alleged attacks on McGowan's daughter, Ruth, 13.

Previously, Mrs. Josephine Donnally, cousin of the girl, told of rushing into the physician's office after hearing the girl scream twice. Mrs. Donnally testified she was sitting in the outer office when she heard the screams.

"My God, it's Ruth!' she said she exclaimed. At this point, she continued, three policemen, who had been waiting outside, rushed in and entered the inner office. She said Dr. Greenhut was fleeing into an alcove in the room when she entered with the officers.

She testified on cross-examination she and the child went to the office because J. C. L. Anderson, Baltimore County State's attorney, "said we should." Police told her, she continued, that they had instructed Ruth to scream if Dr. Greenhut "started anything."

McGowan, who said he and his wife had three children and that Ruth was the eldest, denied he and his wife and Ruth ever discussed in their home plans for her to signal the officers. Defense questions as to whether the family ever discussed suing the physician were ruled out.

Mrs. McGowan took the stand briefly to testify as to the girl's age.

Magistrate Walter Harvey, of Dundalk, where the alleged attack took place, told of arrangements made with the girl to signal the waiting police officers.

The prosecution contends the girl was attacked prior to the night the physician was arrested and that she told her parents. Police Lieut. William B. Dorsey, of Baltimore County, testified he accompanied the girl to the doctor's office. He said he and other policemen waited about 40 or 50 feet from the first-floor office. When he rushed into the office, he said, the girl was standing up, crying. She wore shoes and socks, and had a sheet wrapped around her, he said.

Still Seeking.

To keep the record straight it was more or less incumbent on President Roosevelt to tell Senator Thomas, in the letter which the Oklahoma legislator now makes public, that "the United States is still seeking the 'kind of dollar which a generation hence will have the same purchasing and debt-paying power as the dollar value we hope to attain in the near future'."

That was the line which the President took in the summer and fall of 1933, when Prof. Warren's commodity dollar theory was flickering like Aurora Borealis across the New Deal sky. And he committed himself to the rubber dollar so thoroughly at that time as to make a present retreat as difficult as it would be desirable.

But the statement on the subject of a fixed price level made by the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, and released simultaneously with the President's letter, tells its own story. Here the commodity dollar idea is damned with exceedingly faint praise and the conclusion is that "economic stability rather than price stability should be the general objective of public policy."

In other words, the Federal Reserve governors tell Senator Thomas the job for Congress is to cut out deficit financing, get the budget balanced and stop worrying about short cuts to Utopia via monetary experimentation.

Their statement, with its thoughtful criticism of managed currency policies, is full of meat. But it must be weighed against the President's current intimation that he has by no means abandoned the fight for restoration of the AAA, or some other form of managed crop control.

As the Federal Reserve governors say, "monetary factors are only one of the groups of forces affecting business activity." Unregulated crops, the President points out, are another. Before there is renewed effort to bring all these forces under governmental regimentation it would be wise to study how well a very advanced program of that character is working out in Germany.

What Of These Nights?

There was no mention in the gossip columns, yet those "in the know" had long predicted it. Early Tuesday morning one of the most romantic occurrences of the decade took place. Venus was kissed by the Man in the Moon.

The precise word for the romantic action, however, was not "osculation" but occultation." Astronomers talk a dry lingo. In any case, about 3 in the morning the silvery crescent slid across the beams of Venus. For half an hour the planet was obscured until suddenly it emerged from the dark side of the moon, looking like a sparkling diamond chipped off the edge of the earth's satellite.

But this was only a curtain-raiser for the month's celestial program. August brings the Perseids. These meteors are among the most reliable of Nature's sidereal extravaganzas.

For more than a century they have been regularly observed showering the midsummer heavens, supplying as many as 120 rushes of light per hour at the height of their performance, between the tenth and twelfth of the month. Because they follow the track of Tuttle's comet, which has not been seen for years, it is believed the meteors are the remains of that wanderer's scattered head. This is only theory, but it is nice to think that when a comet loses its head the results can be so picturesque.

No theory, but actual observation announced the biggest heavenly display of August. That is the unexpected appearance of a new comet, called Finsler in honor of the Zurich mathematician who first spotted it.

On a clear night it should be visible (though not its tail) to the naked eye, approximately halfway between the North Star and the two "pointers" of the Dipper. It is moving toward the handle of the latter constellation and will pass between its second and third stars—Alioth and Mizor. At this point Finsler will be at his brightest, located only 56,000,000 miles from the earth. Thereafter he will slowly fade, to vanish finally in the northern skies whence he emerged on July 5.

Since this comet is estimated to be eight times larger than the earth, and to bear a tail more than 1,000,000 miles long, its casual twirlings through the void encourage modesty. They suggest rather vividly the pin-point proportions of the horizons by which man orients his clamorous career.

The New Judiciary Tangle.

Just as President Roosevelt intimated that he will nominate a successor to Justice Van Devanter before Congress adjourns, the Senate has opened what may well prove to be the most muddled chapter of the whole Supreme Court controversy. For Senator Borah has made perfectly clear that there is a very serious question as to whether any vacancy actually exists.

The President seems to be fully aware of the unfavorable reaction created by Attorney General Cummings' opinion that a new justice could be named during the forthcoming Congressional recess. His press conference remarks on Tuesday must be taken to indicate that no recess appointment is contemplated. That commendable response to public opinion will quickly end all criticism aroused by the implications of Mr. Cummings' opinion.

So it is especially unfortunate that the status of this post should have become so seriously confused at the moment when the President appears ready to fill it. The debate initiated by Senator Borah leaves no doubt that although retired, Justice Van Devanter is still technically a member of the Supreme Court. Under the Constitution justices can be removed from their posts only by death, impeachment or resignation. Mr. Van Devanter certainly has not resigned. His letter of May 18 to the President plainly indicated his intention merely "to retire from regular active service on the bench."

Nor does the Sumners act contemplate severance of aged justices from membership on the court. That measure was enacted recently to facilitate reorganization of the court and thus relieve pressure for the bill authorizing appointment of six new justices. It specifically sets up "rights and privileges (of Supreme Court justices) with regard to retiring, instead of resigning." Indeed, if justices should be compelled to resign before obtaining retirement pay, there could be no guarantee that such benefits would be continued until their death.

Moreover, Congress provided that retired justices may be called upon for further service. In view of these indisputable facts, it would be idle to contend that Mr. Van Devanter is not now legally a member of the supreme bench. But it does not necessarily follow that no vacancy exists. The Sumners act also authorizes the President to appoint a successor to any justice "retiring from regular active service." Obviously, then, it was the intent of Congress to replace justices who relinquish active duties as such.

These facts lend considerable strength to Senator George's conclusion that Congress has unwittingly sanctioned an increase in the Supreme Court's membership. Considering the Senate's emphatic rejection of the Administration's request for six additional justices, the whole situation becomes almost ridiculous.

The truth is, of course, that Congress passed the poorly drafted Sumners act in a desperate effort to minimize the Supreme Court row, and without realizing the implications which Senator Borah has now made clear. Whichever way the statute is interpreted it leads to untenable conclusions.

If no vacancy is created when a justice retires, the law might soon put the court out of operation. For, as Senator Logan pointed out, six justices are now eligible to retire and the three remaining jurists would not constitute a quorum for the adjudication of cases.

On the other hand, if retirements leaving justices subject to further duty do create vacancies, membership of the court may fluctuate anywhere between 9 and 18. Obviously, this statute has created an intolerable muddle.

While the President is selecting his nominee, Congress should quickly amend the act so as to require resignations from justices who wish to leave the bench with full pay. And to avoid the many complications now possible that amendment should be rushed through before the vacancy is filled. At present there certainly seems to be no valid legal reason why Justice Van Devanter should not decide to return to active service rather than resign.

One-Sided Sovereignty.

Following an extensive investigation, the Social Security Board has suspended payments to the State of Illinois under the old-age assistance plan. The suspension, it is said, will continue "until such time as the administration of the old-age assistance plan in the State substantially complies with the requirements of the State and Federal laws."

Gov. Horner calls this action "tyrannical," reminding the board that Illinois is "still a sovereign State." However, that is no reason why the sovereign United States should contribute to the support of the aged poor of Illinois without attaching reasonable conditions to the grant. When Illinois spends Federal funds, the Federal authorities rightly insist that the State's accounts shall be in shape for auditing and that the law itself shall be strictly complied with.

Such qualifications on grants to individual States are merely an elementary and essential precaution against dissipation or diversion of funds belonging to the people of 48 States. The State governments must be prepared to surrender some of their freedom of action in order to qualify for such bounties. If they resent dictation from without they must also oppose the legislative trend toward centralization of power in the hands of Federal administrative agencies at Washington and their subordinates in the field.

Instead, representatives of some of the States protesting against invasion of their sovereign rights frequently make the most vociferous demands for Federal subsidies to bolster their local institutions.

The Housing Bill.

When the Wagner housing bill goes to the House it will be a very different measure from that which was introduced in the Senate last winter. By a series of amendments the Senate has altered the bill from an extravagant authorization of subsidies to a relatively modest experiment in slum reclamation. Almost every change that has been made has brought some improvement.

The amending process began while the bill was before the Committee on Education and Labor. It has been carried on even more extensively on the Senate floor. So many objectionable features have been eliminated that, with careful administration, the bill would now seem to provide the basis for a satisfactory national policy on low-cost housing.

Foremost among the improvements is the Walsh amendment providing that no subsidies shall be granted for housing projects unless they include the elimination, improvement or effective closing of unsafe and insanitary dwellings approximately equal in number to the new units to be constructed. That change definitely concentrates the benefits under the bill on the reclamation of blighted areas. In practice this restriction may prove somewhat too rigid. But at least it will prevent repetition of the glaring mistakes of previous Federal efforts to provide low-cost housing.

As a further safeguard against use of taxpayers' money for development of elaborate communities far beyond the financial reach of slum dwellers, the Senate struck out the authorization for demonstration projects. Undertakings of this sort already built by Federal agencies demonstrate only that good houses can be built when exorbitant subsidies are provided. What is now needed is a demonstration that municipalities can eliminate their own slums and rehouse the occupants with reasonable aid from Washington. That can best be proved by localizing all projects in the beginning.

Senator Byrd's amendment restricting the cost of housing projects in this program to $1,000 per room and $4,000 per unit is also aimed at keeping the feet of the proposed housing authority on the ground. The aim here is entirely constructive. As the amendment was adopted by the Senate, however, it might forbid Government aid for slum reclamation in some cities where housing conditions are worst.

Last year, for example, the District Alley Dwelling Authority was able to build Hopkins Place for less than $900 per room. But building costs are said to have gone up 20 per cent since these houses were started. There is a serious question as to whether any slums could be removed in Washington or New York under the bill as it now stands. On the other hand, this limitation is not sufficiently low to keep costs at a minimum in many other communities where building costs are cheaper. Before the bill is finally approved that provision should be modified to take account of the diversity of local conditions.

Some question has been raised, too, as to whether Washington's Alley Dwelling Authority is included among the agencies that could obtain loans and grants for low-cost housing under the bill. Senator Wagner believes the local agency is eligible. But if there is any question whatever as to its status, a clarifying clause should be inserted; for the ADA is already providing an excellent model for slum reclamation enterprises in other communities.

Additional changes in the bill are doubtless desirable. But in its present form constructive possibilities appear to outweigh the defects. If the House should improve the measure as much as has the Senate, it would provide a most encouraging beginning for the enormous task of eliminating our costly and demoralizing slums.

East Meets East.

For sheer human interest, a recent news photograph of two Oriental girls could hardly be surpassed. It was a picture of Ruth Sumi Sakurai and Chang Hseuh Min, traveling companions en route to the first International Girl Scout Encampment.

Typically Oriental, with slant eyes, straight black hair, and olive complexions, the two girls made a quaint sight in their adaptions of Scout outfits. Miss Sakurai even sported a broad-brimmed hat, suggestive of a sombrero. But what challenged the imagination was not so much their appearance as the fact that Miss Sakurai came from Tokyo and Miss Min from Peiping! And this in a newspaper proclaiming on its front page the story of Japan's slow but steady push into China and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's plea to the women of China to "Fight Japan 'According to Their Ability'."

The Girl Scouts are to be congratulated on their first international encampment at Briarcliff Manor, which follows so closely on the heels of that of their brother Scouts in this city. But especially are they to be congratulated on having two members who can place their Scout pledge to "help other people at all times" above prejudice and nationality and travel together companionably from countries whose armies are hurling themselves at each other.

Eye Exercises.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with a great deal of interest in the "beauty" columns of The Post advice to wear colored glasses and do eye exercises to improve the looks of the eyes. From personal experience I have found that colored glasses and eye exercises are incompatible with each other.

There are eye exercises which will produce desirable results: better looking, seeing, and feeling eyes, but I have yet to learn of a case where colored glasses did anything of the sort. Usually colored glasses weaken the eyes and make them more sensitive to light.

The light exercise to strengthen and improve the looks of the eyes and the face about the eyes is very simple. One merely holds the face and closed eyes toward the sun and moves the head from side to side, allowing the eyes to move freely with the movement of the head as if looking over one shoulder and then the other.

In doing this exercise, at first the sun through the closed eyelids will appear red, orange or some other color. Presently, however, the sun will appear whiter as the eyes become more relaxed. When the sun appears almost milk white (the sun is a white light) the eyes will become relaxed and strengthened. If this exercise is practiced for a few minutes two or three times a day one will soon notice that the eyes will appear brighter looking, wrinkles about the eyes may disappear, and the eyes will feel a great deal more relaxed and strengthened.

The best results are had with this exercise if the eyelids are lightly closed and the eyeballs are allowed to move freely with the head.

Louisiana Petition.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am enclosing a copy of a letter I have sent July 31 from New Orleans to Mr. Garner.

HILDA PHELPS HAMMOND.
Chairman, Women's Committee of Louisiana.

Honorable John N. Garner,
President of the Senate,
Washington, D. C.

Sir: On Monday, July 26, a petition from the Women's Committee of Louisiana was delivered to you by registered mail. Press reports state that you refuse to receive it officially and present it to the Senate because you consider that our petition does not meet the requirements of the Judiciary Committee.

We call to your attention that the founders of this Nation—desiring to make it possible for the humblest citizen to communicate with Congress concerning his grievances—did not require that petitions meet the yardstick of a Judiciary Committee when they wrote the right of petition into the Bill of Rights.

However, since you have assumed this curious position, we now ask you to inform us at once what requirements of the Judiciary Committee our petition fails to meet. Our petition is couched in respectful language, is properly addressed and properly signed by citizens of this country, and asks for a redress of grievances. Surely the Senate of the United States is not a secret society guarding a secret password to hamstring the American people from exercising their constitutional right of petition!

In conclusion, we remind you that due to the impending adjournment of Congress ordinary fairness demands that you notify us immediately of your specific objections so that we may have ample time to consider them.

"Radical Foreigners."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When election day rolls around one-half of the native-born, loyal American element of our population calling themselves Democrats will march to the polls and cancel the votes of the other half calling themselves Republicans. Moscow will chuckle with glee and view with the contempt they deserve a people so steeped in hide-bound tradition that they will let the spawn of the scum of Europe infiltrate and menace their national life rather than yield one jot of title of their prejudices.

Once upon a time a bald-headed man sat quietly reading his paper while letting the flies skate back and forth over his dome. After a while a wasp came zooming along and stung him right on top of his bald spot. He calmly swept his hand over his head and said, "Now, just for that you can all get off."

Perhaps after we have had our factories ruined by sit-down strikes incited by radical foreigners who can hardly speak the English language, the Democratic and Republican elements of our native-born population will get mad enough to get together and take control of their own government again.

Golfer's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A public announcement, tacked on the clubhouse of the West Potomac Golf Course, about May 1, reads as follows:

West Potomac Golf Course will close May 23 on account of Boy Scout Jamboree and will reopen Saturday a. m., July 17.

The "closing" part was prompt enough, but the "re-opening"—well, it certainly looks like the poor, District, municipal golfer will need a friend.

In connection with the foregoing, there are some who would like to know why all of the West Potomac Golf Course, with some of the East Potomac Golf Course, were, alone, appropriated for this purpose, while all the other recreation grounds—those for tennis, baseball, polo (which is seldom in use) entirely escaped the onslaught.

What perhaps now is of most importance is whether it is true, as has been stated, that the concessionaire of these appropriated golf grounds is to receive adequate compensation for all the time they are out of play. That, of course, would be only fair—as to him. The only sufferers, aside from the taxpayers, would be those who would like to play a little golf this summer.

AMATEUR GOLFER.
Washington, Aug. 3.

Expensive Syphilis Tests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I laughed, almost, when I read such conscientiously noble portrayals of our District doctors' and newspapers' crusade and concern about the spread of syphilis.

In particular do I remember the lament by one doctor that some of his infectious patients had stopped visiting him.

Well, it may surprise some of the complacent and superficial people here and some of the doctors to learn that quite a few people do not have the $5 for a Wassermann test for syphilis; also the cost for treatments is sometimes too high, and I suspect that occasionally treatments are unnecessarily prolonged with innocuous treatments before effective remedy is given. If the test price could be reduced to $2 or $3, that would help a great deal.

Unless some such action as here suggested is effected, such professing of social consciousness as I have recently read seems hypocritical, weak and disappointing to anyone who lives hoping and trying to see people given a decent chance in this already too disgraceful world and who does hope that those who do have the ability to alleviate conditions and lead for betterment will not betray their intellectual honesty nor disclaim any semblance of a soul (if there is such a thing).

WAVERING OPTIMIST.
Washington, Aug. 1.

Doubtful Remedy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Congress gave the President a blank check for approximately $5,000,000,000 to spend in the 48 States, Congress, in large part, surrendered its independence. Now the President wants another blank check for $1,500,000,000, which he will probably receive. What we need is a constitutional amendment which would prevent any President from interfering directly or indirectly in the politics of any State except the one of which he may be a citizen, thus to prevent him from putting pressure on members of Congress to do his will.

Adopting the New Deal methods of gaining results, or objectives, now, within the Constitution, and without waiting for a constitutional amendment, I suggest that instead of handing over the $1,500,000,000 to the Executive to spend in the States, the Congress increase the salaries of its members to about $3,000,000 each. The total of the salaries would amount to but a few paltry million dollars more than what the President asks, and it would enable each member, if charitably minded, to look after his own back yard and tell Farley et al. to go home, or elsewhere.

R. W.
Washington, Aug. 2.

On Recess Appointments Of Judges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is inconceivable from a commonsense point of view how any one, and especially a lawyer, could believe the President has authority to fill a vacancy on the Supreme Court after the adjournment of Congress when such vacancy "happened" while the Senate was in session.

Section 2 of Article 2 of the Constitution gives the President power to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint judges of the Supreme Court. It also gives the President power to fill vacancies that may "happen;" and undoubtedly the word "happen" means the same as "occur" during the recess of the Senate.

Constitutions are construed by the same rules that applied to the construction of statutes. This language of the Constitution is plain. He can only fill a vacancy that happens during a recess of the Senate. Here we have a statement of a single circumstance under which a vacancy may be filled. The rule—"Expressio unius, est exclusio alterius"—meaning the expression of one thing is exclusive of all others, is a rule of construction that applies, and would seem to clearly preclude the filling of a vacancy which happened while the Senate was in session, after adjournment of the Senate. Every reason is in favor of such a construction.

True, some appointments have been made in the past contrary to this apparent rule, but the judges so appointed did not qualify until they were confirmed by the Senate, which indicates that they entertained the opinion that such appointments could not be properly made.

A. S. L.
Washington, Aug. 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the Constitution a recess appointment to the Supreme Court is but temporary, expiring at the end of the next session of Congress, and its very temporary nature will subject the probationer to the complete domination and control of the President during his entire term. If he performs according to the expectations of the master, he can hope for a permanent appointment. If he happens to get out of control, perhaps another appointee may perform more to the master's liking. If Roosevelt is elected for a third term this procedure could be continued for six years, possibly involving the control of several votes during such period, depending upon the number of retirements.

"War Days."

IT is exactly 20 years since I, in company with most boys between the ages of 9 and 14 lived in the region of West Washington boulevard and Crawford avenue, Chicago, went out "to fight the Germans."

We used to meet every evening after school in "Irv's" lot. Irv didn't really own the lot, he simply lived next door. In the center of the small dirt patch we dug what to me was one of the most interesting trenches ever excavated. One section was covered with tin, overlaid with dirt, and there we "rested" while off duty. Potatoes, baked in the ashes of a hot fire, were our only food. We didn't suffer much, however, since everyone knocked off at 5:30 to go home for supper.

* * *

Our willingness to skirmish in the vacant lot led, by natural steps, to the joining of boys' naval brigade called "The Junior Jackies." For about $4 we were allowed to buy a white uniform with blue trimmings, blue jackie's cap and leggings. Wooden drill guns were extra. Many a cold afternoon we marched down Michigan avenue behind (very far behind, in fact!) the thrilling measures of a Great Lakes Naval Training Station band. Once the famous Sousa himself came to town, and the 500 bandsmen made such a noise we had no trouble keeping in step—miles behind the band.

Some youthful illusions regarding honesty fell in ruins when we discovered that the treasurer of our organization had decamped with most of the funds. But though our illusions regarding honesty evaporated, we were still stanch "patriots" who believed every piece of propaganda that the Americans and the Allies could grind out between them.

In between our forays against the Germans, we had the pleasure of feeling we were "helping to win the war" by cutting down on our food supplies. There was a pound of sugar to be had—if you hadn't already bought one. A dozen eggs (at about $1.10) were available—if you could afford it. Yet, to my mind, the most awful thing Mr Hoover thought up was the idea of using "substitutes" in making bread, cake, cookies, etc.

First of all, my mother tried a bread made of rice. It flopped badly; we didn't like it. She did her best with corn meal and wheat flour. No go. Then she turned out a successful oatmeal affair that was a cross between a muffin and a cookie. We used them for dessert—and how we used them! To this day I can't look such a thing in the face and not feel my gorge rise. Especially did I feel that way when I got older and found out what happened to a lot of the food WE "saved."

* * *

Some of the gayest days of the war were the Sunday dinners we had for soldiers or sailors who happened to be in town. Not that we entertained everyone from Camp Grant and Great Lakes; but my oldest sister always turned up with three or four hungry "gobs" or half a dozen farmer boys from west Texas—just in time for them to get the best cuts of ham and roast beef. I don't remember the name of a single one of those fellows; yet I do remember the round-eyed admiration and hero worship they inspired in those of us who were too small (not too proud) to fight.

Everyone remembers the famous "meatless days," "gasless days," etc. One of my most vivid memories is that of playing baseball on Washington boulevard when a "gasless day" had left that famous Chicago thoroughfare bare of traffic. If some luckless wight should happen into the middle of our game, we howled "slacker" at him for four blocks—or until we saw a magic sign that told us he was a doctor on merciful errand bent. Then it was: "Don't holler, fellows, it's a doctor."

Yes, there were visions of boys going away, of troops marching, of thunderous parades in the Loop, when big guns sent their echoes smashing through the stone canons of streets whose sidewalks were jammed with cheering crowds. There were letters from cousins, friends, distant relatives, all caught up in the giant web of war, all swept with the current of destruction whose stream had sprung forth with a pistol shot in an obscure Bosnian town.

Then there was the false Armistice and the real Armistice and a vision I shall not forget to my dying day. As we poured out of old St. Patrick's School, one of our parish priests, little Father Tita, an Italian, burst into view. In one hand he held an American flag, in the other an Italian. He jumped up and down crying "Viva, viva, viva," and all who saw him shared his cheers and his tears. The war was over; and we of that growing generation are still struggling in the ruins of what should have been our futures.

Fair Enough

Mr. Green's Tears.

WILLIAM GREEN, of the American Federation of Labor, recently shed a tear for me as one who had been voted into the C. I. O. by the National Convention of the Newspaper Guild. That was indeed kind of Mr. Green, and I really didn't know he cared, but he can dry his eyes because I can handle this myself.

I don't want to go into that subject just now, and the purpose of this is not to discuss the unionization of the newspaper business, but just generally the type of union that Mr. Green's organization offers everybody. His type of union presumes to sell licenses to work and to collect income tax on the members' earnings, and for these reasons and some others is just as bad as the C. I. O. with its mobile mobs.

I am paying two income taxes now, Federal and State, and while I have much more fault to find with the capricious and vindictive actions of the Internal Revenue Department against persons who exercise their constitutional right to oppose the Administration or criticize the catchpolls, a man at least can have his day in court with them.

• • • •

MOREOVER, unless he goes to Alcatraz for lese majesty he still has a right to earn a living, if he can find a job. Mr. Green's type of labor unions, on the other hand, have a habit of restricting jobs by limiting the number of union members and apprentices, and I know of one union, the News-Reel Photographers', which demands and gets an initiation fee of $1,000—which I believe is tops in tribute.

In unions of this type—and there are many of them—an initiation fee of $250 is not uncommon, and I would say offhand that this is a hell of a way to spread employment and get the idle back to work. And, of course, in addition to the initiation fee by which a nominally free American buys from an unofficial and irresponsible government within the public government the right to earn a living, there are dues, based on wages, and assessments and fines.

If a man can't or will not pay the initiation fee to the union controlling his line of work, he can't have a job, even though some employer would be glad to hire him, and if he does pay and then goes obstreperous about union politics or finances he runs the risk of being tossed out and blacklisted.

Initiation fees, dues, assessments and fines lump up to very sturdy totals and have attracted the professional interest of many labor politicians who run their unions the same way that ward bosses run party politics.

And the rank and filers often are afraid to say yes or no about union business affecting their jobs, their earnings and the welfare of their families. There are not many individuals who have the courage to stand up in meeting and quarrel with professionals who know the tricks of intimidation, and an issue involving the human rights of an honest working stiff may be decided the wrong way by nothing more parliamentary or legal than an invitation to step out in the hall and get his ears punched off.

• • • •

I AM VERY WARY of government control of unions because that is the way of fascism and nazism, but I insist, nevertheless, that some way must be found to guarantee an open chance for a man to work without having to buy a license, to abolish the artificial restrictions on opportunity established by some labor unions, to curb the capacity of labor politicians and to compel a square accounting and an honest disposition of the money that is collected.

We do have our laws relating to conspiracy and embezzlement, but they have been generally ineffective in this field, and the intimidation clause of the Wagner act covering coercive actions by the boss is not interpreted to protect a workman from intimidation by a union or even by a known racketeer engaged in union exploitation.

The practice of assigning men from union headquarters to work on approved jobs may be all right in theory, pretending to allot the work on an impartial basis, but a group of tough leaders can fumble the list and give it all to their friends or exact a kickback while a square guy shines apples on a corner.

These are a few little imperfections which sometimes appear in Mr. Green's type of union, and I hope he won't be hurt with me for proposing that he quit kidding the public and do a little delousing and sweeping.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Entitled "Bugs."

Psychopathic Case No. 11087 took two handsprings off the polished floor and laughed hysterically. "Japan, insisting that she is a champion of world peace, shells Chinese territory, bombs Chinese libraries and massacres Chinese soldiers and civilians! The Chinese say peace by negotiation is now impossible, but they are against war. And they say I'm nuts!"

• • • •

He now tried to balance himself atop a bridge table on his chin. "The Japs bombing Chinese territory say they are merely disciplining some bandits for China's own good. Neutrals, dodging the bombers, can't act under antiwar treaties because the bombing is purely technical and in no way involves an act of war. And the verdict that I am crazy was unanimous!"

• • • •

Psychopathic Case 11087 now attempted to chin himself on a horizontal bar that wasn't there. "Look at Spain! It's being made a shambles for the good of the Spanish people! The greatest slaughter in its history is being carried on to bring the people true happiness. And they call my case a violent one!"

• • • •

"Russia! Oh, boy! She bumps off her engineers as soon as they get things on such a plane of efficiency that they get more work than they can handle! She arrests prominent officials on charges of treason and they stage a stampede to be the first to plead guilty! And I'm in here for not being normal!"

• • • •

At this point he took out two lumps of sugar and fed them to an imaginary horse. "Anthony Eden tells Mussolini England will stand no nonsense and Premier Chamberlain sends Benito a note expressing respect and implicit confidence! Look at what is happening in Germany! No, don't look at what is happening in Germany. If what the doctors say is okay, I'm goofy enough."

• • • •

Case No. 11087 took an alarm clock off a shelf and held it behind him, insisting that he was an outboard motorboat. "Take America! The Government, denouncing cheap ethics, low standards of honesty and anything approaching law evasion, tolerates the oldest of all rackets, the souvenir book game, to pay off its campaign expenses! The NRA proves a failure, so we vote a new NRA and call it something else. The Republican Party indorses a Socialist as Mayor of New York! Pardon me a minute."

• • • •

"What're you doing?" asked your correspondent.

"Taking off my quadrilateral spinnaker," replied Case No. 11087. "Maybe I can get out of this if I try a Genoa jib."

Campaign In Brazil

Correspondent Reports Three Candidates For Presidency Already Electioneering; Totalitarian Party Well Organized.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Rio de Janeiro.

IN COUNTRIES which usually begin their presidential campaigns four years before the vote takes place, an election which is only six months off is just around the corner. In Brazil there is a constitutional provision which requires that every would-be candidate who holds a certain class of public office must resign from his post one year before the election in order to qualify as a candidate. Thus the campaign can be said to have begun actively, in Brazil, around January 2 of this year, and the first hats tossed into the ring were the resignations from governorships and cabinet posts. Those resignations, however, many feared might have proved to be vain sacrifices. Even though the atmosphere had begun to clear it was still uncertain whether there would be an election. Many observers believed that "continuism" was going to operate once more and that this institution plus certain foreign extremist ideas were going to rule the day.

Just about a year ago something happened and despite the state of war, despite the temporary unpopularity of a "decaying and decadent democracy," which no one any longer mentioned and despite the popularity of totalitarian ideas disguised as the only true bulwark against the "Communists" who had revolted in November of 1935, democratic ideas began to bob up. The then Governor of the State of Sao Paulo made a ringing speech in its behalf. And after President Roosevelt's visit democracy became so popular again that one of the candidates has ridden into the arena on a democratic charger. The other candidates have followed suit and even the Integralistas, the Brazilian totalitarians, claim that they are the true defenders of democratic customs.

Dr. Salles Oliveira First to Toss in Hat.

THERE ARE three candidates. The first to come out openly was Dr. Amando de Salles Oliveira, until January 2 governor of the State of Sao Paulo. An engineer by profession, he had never been in politics until he was appointed by Provisional President Vargas, as interventor in the State of Sao Paulo. When the nation returned to constitutionalism, in 1934, he became the constitutional governor. In both capacities Dr. Salles showed a liberality and breadth of vision which shortly translated itself into achievements of worth. One can summarize his function as governor by saying that he sought to introduce common sense and efficiency in the administration of his large and wealthy state and that he perceived clearly the cultural needs of his people.

Before the actual campaign got under way the question most often asked was, "Who will be the official candidate?" It was a curious question because Vargas came into power in the 1930 revolution precisely because he had been defeated by an "official" candidate and he claimed that he wanted to do away with the custom. One by one he has chopped off the heads, metaphorically speaking, of all those would-be candidates who sought his blessing, and because he had not chosen to indicate a successor many deemed he favored himself for a third term. But eventually the governor of the State of Minas Geraes, seemingly close to Vargas, but like Finnegan, "On again and off again," called a meeting of state governors.

This "national convention" chose Sr. Jose Americo de Almeida, a northerner who had sided with Vargas in the 1930 revolution and who had been Vargas' minister of communications and was, at the time of his selection, a justice of the tribunal of accounts. He has been called the "official" candidate, but there is now some doubt as to whether this is actually the case.

Senhor Americo is a novelist and thoroughly Brazilian in character, training, outlook and experience. Unlike Dr. Salles Oliveira, he has not traveled and is an ardent nationalist. He denies that he opposes foreign capital but his friends and foes alike stress his rather narrow interests and outlook, the former to praise, the latter to criticize. Up to the time of writing he had not yet announced his program. The support of 18 state governments would seem to assure him of success at the polls next January, but things have changed in Brazil and some observers feel that the very existence of this "official" support may be the undoing of the "national" candidate.

Even the reader who does not know Brazilian politics must realize by now that the absence of parties is responsible for this rather unusual method of choosing candidates, for these peculiar questions and for the character of the campaign. Dr. Salles Oliveira is endeavoring to create a great national party and has founded the Brazilian Democratic Union. But the word "union" gives away the federated character of the party. It is a union of state parties and groups who have backed the candidacy of Dr. Armando. And for sometime to come most "national" parties will be nothing more nor less than federations of local groups.

Integralista Party Described as Fascistic.

THE ONE EXCEPTION is the Integralista Party which has chosen its leader, Sir Plinio Salgado, as its candidate for the presidency in the coming election. This is the Green Shirt Party which stands for God, family and country.

It is a Brazilianized form of fascism or national socialism and many of its opponents assert that it is not as Brazilianized as it should be, alleging that it is financed with foreign funds. In any event, and regardless of its program or philosophy, it is the only party with discipline, with branches in all Brazil which obey blindly the orders of the leader. Salgado is an intellectual, novelist and poet whose "mystic" has captured the fancy of many who see in him the savior of Brazil. He is supported by many churchmen, devout laymen, military officers and others who belong in the conservative ranks. The party, however, claims to be social-minded, democratic in essence, though not in form, and the party of the masses. It is extremely nationalistic.

When it paraded in Sao Paulo an alleged Communist broke up the proceedings by firing a revolver, and there are those who believe that it is the least popular of the "parties." Recent events and utterances have caused some political leaders to wonder though whether this party and its leader are not the "official" ones. There are those who feel that if the President were actually to speak his mind he might choose the Integralistas.

Unless the unforeseen happens it appears that one of the real benefits of the 1930 revolution was the creation of the Supreme Electoral Court. This will insure a fair election. This body has already shown its impartiality in deciding one important state election and is constantly passing on a number of appeals brought to it from many localities. When former Foreign Minister, Jose Carlos de Macedo Soares, was recently appointed minister of justice he immediately inaugurated a policy which clarified the atmosphere even more. The "state of war" was abolished, most of the political prisoners were released and the censorship of press and correspondence was lifted. With constitutional guarantees restored it became possible to campaign, to speak and write without the constant fear of arrest or worse.

First Presidential Election Since 1929.

BRAZIL is having her first presidential election since 1929, and it would seem that things have taken a turn for the better. The main candidates exchanged courtesies at the very outset of the campaign and both have endeavored to place the contest on the high level of ideas and principles rather than of personalities. Both are traveling about the country taking themselves and their platforms to people in states where they are not known. Brazil being what it is, this means in most states other than the homes of the respective candidates. Senhor Jose Americo de Almeida comes from the state of Parahyba, in the north of Brazil, and Dr. Armando de Salles Oliveira is a Paulista. Thus the latter plans to go north and the former south.

This geographic feature, the origin of the two main candidates, adds a special interest to the campaign. For decades the three main coffee states—Rio de Janeiro, Minas Geraes and Sao Paulo—dominated the politics and federal government of Brazil and one of the ostensible reasons for the revolution of 1930 was to dethrone the Paulistas, especially, and to give other regions of the nation a say in national life. The Paulistas, defeated in 1930, rose in arms in 1932 and were defeated again. This civil war left a bitterness in Brazilian life which threatened at times to divide the nation in two and which, many observers believed, precluded the success of a Paulista in the 1938 campaign. Many of his friends, even, felt that Dr. Salles Oliveira was making a bad mistake in not waiting another four years and letting the religionist animosities die down. He has been a good campaigner, however, and seems to have overridden the initial handicap.

The campaign is being carried on "American style." Radio, autogyros with streamers, loudspeakers movie shorts, open-air meetings, nation-long (rather than wide, in Brazil) hook-ups, interviews, pamphlets, billboard posters, buttons and insignia with pictures of the candidates, are seen or heard everywhere. All or most of these are new in Brazilian electioneering and suggest that the masses somehow or other have grown into the picture. In the days when the official candidate won without a contest, because the President pulled all the strings, it was unnecessary to go to the people. But now even the so-called "official" candidate is campaigning actively. And each side is endeavoring to present its man as the socially-minded candidate.

Appeals to People Declared Significant.

THE EMERGENCE of the people in a Latin American political campaign—even though in an utterly passive role—bespeaks a change in civilization which is significant and which has a bearing on the course of democracy in this part of the world.

Even though the voting population of Brazil's 45,000,000 is not more than 4,000,000 the political analysts of the nation are now figuring the candidate's possibilities in the terms of votes rather than in those of presidential or military support. The candidates, too, must believe that the voters will swing the tide one way or the other. There is no other explanation for the character of the campaign being carried out. They must believe, too, that the President is going to maintain an attitude of impartiality and that the Supreme Electoral Court can be counted on for objectivity and fairness.

In the absence of parties and party platforms, the main issues at stake are those that derive from the personality and personal philosophy of the candidates. If by any chance Plinio Salgado and the Integralistas should win, Brazil will have an Italian type of totalitarian state—though many think this would provoke a revolution. As between Americo and Salles the difference is between that of a novelist and engineer, for one thing, and between a nontraveled nationalist and a traveled cosmopolitan on the other. Salles is a tall, handsome figure, who is creating a radio personality. Americo hasn't got far enough under way for the general public to judge him yet. But all three are at it and all Brazil is watching the fray with unusual interest.

Girl Scout Encampment Delegate Is Selected

Mary Negley Scully, of Winchester, Va., will also be among the specially selected delegates. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will visit the camp on August 10 and address the girls.

Clever Timing

By Felix Morley

Why Japan Strikes Now.

THE MOMENT was carefully chosen when, on the night of September 18, 1931, Japanese troops seized Mukden and started the military operations which in six months resulted in establishment of the puppet state of Manchukuo. That aggression was beautifully timed. It is perhaps not generally realized that the cues of other actors on the world stage are being followed in the present fighting, which has already torn the former capital of China from the control of the central government.

The 1931 aggression came at a time when intelligent calculation showed that effective resistance on the part of the world's peace machinery was unlikely. The superficial solidarity of the League of Nations had been greatly weakened by the effects of a prolonged and unprecedented depression. Russia and the United States, the two great powers which could be expected to oppose the seizure of Manchuria most strongly, were in neither case members of the Geneva organization. Furthermore this country and the Soviet Union did not then recognize each other.

Through the gaps between American policy, weakened by the approach of a Presidential election, and Russian policy, suspect in both Washington and Geneva, and League policy, subject to a wobbly British control, there was plenty of room for a subtle diplomacy to work its way. All that the Japanese needed to do was to play Geneva, Washington and Moscow against each other while their army relentlessly put through the job in hand. History records the success of the operation.

• • • •

THE BACKGROUND of the fighting which flared out near Peiping a month ago is not an exact parallel but is very similar to that behind the seizure of Manchuria. One of the chief differences is that the forces of collective action are far weaker, and those of the Chinese government somewhat stronger, than was the case in 1931. Consequently there is now less diplomatic guile, more open military domination, in the policy of Tokyo. There is no longer need for Japan to appear to pull her punches.

The undisguised aggressiveness now exhibited by Japan is not due to the collapse of the League as a considerable factor, though of course this helps in removing any necessity for a moral defense by Tokyo.

Of more moment are three less obvious considerations: (1) the sympathetic attitude of Germany and Italy; (2) the desirability of acting before Great Britain rearms and before China becomes more unified; (3) the recent loss of international influence on the part of both Russia and the United States. Unquestionably all these considerations have been carefully weighed by the Japanese general staff.

• • • •

GERMANY AND ITALY of course find Japanese Machtpolitik to their liking. Entirely aside from the recent alliance between Germany and Japan, these three nations now form a bloc committed to the doctrine that aggressive war is entirely ethical and recognition of its territorial gains desirable. Of course every additional successful act of aggression helps to confirm this doctrine and to throw another spadeful of earth on the grave of the Kellogg Pact.

And it is a matter of mutual advantage. If Italy and Germany smile benevolently on Japan's present policy it is very likely that Tokyo will soon find good reasons for recognizing the regime of Gen. Franco in Spain.

The second reason for the attack at the present time illustrates Japanese prescience. Great Britain has important commercial interests in North China, and were she prepared to back her words with force would doubtless be speaking out explicitly on the subject now. But Britain's bluff against Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia collapsed for lack of military backing. British arms factories and shipyards today are working overtime to remove that deficiency. Japan knows, however, that she has a year or so of leeway so far as Great Britain is concerned. And to establish Manchukuo took only six months.

Time is also taken by the forelock with respect to the unification of China. Judging by progress during the past six years it would not now take a long breathing spell for the Nanking government to extend its writ to all parts of this huge country. Progress in communications, industralization, orderly government and military efficieney have all been rapid in China of late. Finance Minister Kung has just completed a world tour which has opened up notable prospects for Chinese trade and commerce. From the Japanese viewpoint this means that the present golden opportunity for reducing North China to a state of vassalage may never recur.

FURTHERMORE, NEITHER the United States nor Russia is today in a position effectively to restrain Japan. We recently served notice to Tokyo, by our neutrality law, that if she wishes to conquer more of China it will be okay with us. Such an absurd advance surrender of a great power's influence for peace is not likely to be permanent policy. One may be sure that a factor in the present Japanese advance is anxiety to capitalize on our misnamed pacifism while the going is good.

Russia's weakness is of a different character. It was symbolized, a few weeks ago, by the executions of Marshal Tukhachevsky and seven other leading generals of the Red army. Very likely the disintegrating effects of this purge will prove temporary. All the more reason for Japan to strike quickly, perhaps with the prior knowledge of Germany and an understanding that Berlin will stage a counter-demonstration if there is any threat of Russian intervention in the Far East.

These are external factors. In addition there is the growing social discontent in Japan, the serious economic and financial situation from which unrest springs, and the popular desire, as demonstrated at the recent general election, to put a curb on the overweening and extravagant pretensions of the militarists. There is nothing novel in the theory that a foreign war serves, at least temporarily, to appease domestic discontent.

Of course the Japanese War Office takes a gamble here. But the stakes are high; and it holds good cards.

Family Murders

By William Lyon Phelps

Collaboration.

I do not mean murders committed by members of the family or cases where an entire family is murdered, although instances of both these tragedies are distressingly frequent; no, I mean murder stories written by members of the family in collaboration.

An excellent illustration of this charming copartnership is found in George Douglas Howard Cole and his wife, Margaret Isabel Cole, the foremost highbrow pair of murder-novelists in the world. Dorothy Sayers is university bred, but she is only one, while these are two. Mr. Cole is a graduate of Balliol College, Oxford, was a Fellow of Magdalen, is now Fellow of University College, Oxford, and a member of the faculty, being university reader in economics; I believe he is also now a member of Parliament in the Labor Party. He has written many books on economics. His wife, Margaret Cole, was born in Cambridge, is the daughter of a professor of latin, is a graduate of Girton College, Cambridge, where she took first class honors, classical tripos. She is a lecturer on economics.

Well, to amuse their spare hours or to divert their minds from what Carlyle so happily called "the dismal science," this pair have written many detective novels, which combine an excellent literary style with good characterization; their plots are fearfully and wonderfully made; and are, for some tastes, so ingenious that rapidity of action suffers. Their latest novel, just out, is called "The Brothers Sackville," and exhibits their distinctive virtues as manufacturers of murder, with their excess of descriptive detail. It is amusing and one feels sure it did not and could not have happened.

Another new murder story, more exciting and not so well written, is "The Peacock Feather Murders," by Carter Dickson. I enjoyed this very much, but I felt cheated at the end, because of the impossibility of the story. A pistol cocked cannot go off unless a finger or something is inserted inside the guard and pulls the trigger. No amount of jarring could set it off. It is commonly believed that a gun or pistol full cocked is particularly dangerous; it is not so dangerous as when the hammer is down. While hunting for 50 years I always carried my shotgun at full cock, and never once did it go off without my intention and trigger-pull. Readers will enjoy this story, but the ending is grotesquely impossible.

Tom McCarthy

A Guest At The Waiters' Ball.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL., Aug. 2.—There was something reassuring in my experience at Colorado Springs. I looked for a job in the afternoon, went to work at a hotel the following morning, and found myself accepted there as completely as if I had come with all the recommendations in the world.

TOM McCARTHY.

To the other bus boys in the hotel, I remained as I had introduced myself, someone passing through in need of a job. Though I was a stranger, whose only definable quality was an apparent desire to knock about the country, I was accepted into their activities warmly as though I'd lived there all my life.

Most of the boys were in their early twenties, and they ranged from vacationing collegiates to married men endeavoring to support a family on definitely moderate earnings. The first night after I had begun work, they took it upon themselves to show me the town and, the following night, the waiters came through with an invitation to their dance.

I wanted to go to that dance, since the invitation was more than sufficient to arouse interest. It requested the bearer of the ticket to "drag his flame to the dance given by the three G's intoxicated." The "three G's" were a trio in long service as waiters, whose professional careers had survived dropped trays and scalding coffee poured down a customer's neck.

• • • •

IT WAS ONE of my fellow bus boys who furnished me a coat and tie, so that I could attend the affair—or possibly affray—and supplied the information as to what might be expected. It proved an interesting sidelight on the waiter's potentialities as a lobbyist.

In order to obtain beer for their guests, the waiters had approached one beer company with a request for several kegs of the stuff. When refused a gratuitous supply, they informed the brewer, whose generosity had become a matter to question, that they would boycott his beer. In the first place they would see that it was taken out of the club which they all frequented. In the second place, they vowed that they would dissuade customers from drinking the product of a company so lacking in gratitude. In the third place, they announced that a rival product would be boosted to the skies, if the rival would talk business.

The rival beer company talked business and, armed with some 30 or more gallons, the waiters at the hotel prepared a collective "tip" received from a convention which had been in session at the hotel.

Some held that significance should be attached to the fact that the party was to be held in the "Eagle's Hall." All reports indicated a high flown affair. However, the warning posted in the bare but spacious aerie of the Colorado Springs Eagles struck a more mundane note. In fact, I feared that it might jar slightly on the sensibilities of the "temperamental" and "meticulously mannered" waiters. A note posted on the wall, over the high lodge chair of the chiefest eagle, informed, "If you spit on the floor at home, go right ahead and do the same here. It gives us real pleasure to know that you feel like you're at home."

As I read the sign, and awaited the commencement of activities pending the opening of keg number one, I felt that the warning was possibly a bit overdone. Little did I realize that a notice forbidding the tossing of guests from the roof and indulgence in frivolous mayhem would have been more to the point.

• • • •

FORMALITY IS the essence of a good waiter's demeanor . . . on duty. At the dance in the Eagles' Hall, nobody was on duty. The party was definitely on the informal side.

In the first place, it was democratic. Members of the orchestra grumbled at the guests, when the refreshments were delayed. Lordly headwaiters danced with sandwich-makers from the pantry. And bus boys cut in on the same waiters who, during the day, acted toward them in the capacity of Simon Legrees.

The affair offered variety, not only in language, but in dress. As the party got underway, the babel of a half dozen foreign tongues drifted toward the ceiling, as compatriots gathered to deliver their toasts in Swedish, German, Italian, French and Spanish. In the manner of dress, it was equally varied. One girl wore a riding habit, another blue lounge slacks. Some wore sports clothes, and some afternoon dresses. The pretty blonde from the salad pantry, attired in an evening gown, looked every inch an aspirant to Hollywood and the movie magazines.

The attire of the erstwhile waiters was no less lacking in variety. Some favored polo shirts, others, flannel slacks and coats, and still others were distinguished by well-tailored business suits. One guest satisfied his sartorial needs with a pair of blue denim trousers and a work shirt.

The kitchen of the hotel may have been a noisy place during the dinner hours, but compared to the noise at the waiters' ball, it was as a peaceful forest glade. The French wine steward joined in harmonic endeavor with an American bus boy and two Greek waiters. "Jumbo," one of the larger waiters, amused himself by tipping over tables in the room off the dance floor, in an endeavor to find out which way of upsetting them would create the most noise. An Italian waiter added his bit to the affray by speeding around the dance floor at a dead run, while one of the girls from the glass-washing department clung to his hand. As she skidded in and out between the dancers, riding her shoes as though they were skis, she let out shrill whoops, indicating that she was having a good time.

THE DANCING was as varied as it was athletic. One of the German waiters cleared the floor with his interpretation of a Viennese waltz. Another created a sensation by merely lifting his partner from the floor and swinging her around and around in mid-air.

They "trucked," waltzed, rhumbaed, tangoed, and "shagged." Some of the bus boys introduced a step or two of the "country club drift," which consists mainly of walking down the dance floor, slowly and indifferently, while contacting the partner with a comradely if not graceful arm, thrown across the shoulders.

When a captain of the waiters entered . . . dripping beer from his usually immaculate clothing . . . to announce that the second keg had been tapped, the party was really under way. The boy sent from the beer company to handle the refreshments had long since deserted his post and was now dancing with the guests. "Jumbo" had deserted his game of table-tipping and was now perched in a window of the hall, hurling whatever he could lay his hands on at the pedestrians who drifted by three stories below.

"We stand up straight all day," he said, "and say 'Yes, sir' and 'No, madam.' So, when we play, we—" His reply was broken by a shrill squeak from one of the girls.

"Help!" she squealed, "they're trying to throw Carl out the window, and its three stories to the street!"

Auto Firm's Head Appeals Tax Case

William J. Nolan, president of a motor car company bearing his name and now in bankruptcy, yesterday asked the Board of Tax Appeals to redetermine an $8,208 deficiency in income taxes and penalties for 1935.

The deficiency was reported by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Nolan was president and general manager and "to all intents and purposes the sole stockholder" of the Nolan Motor Co. during 1935.

Nolan told the Board he was not "at this time in a position" to supply the facts upon which he based his appeal. He said the company is now in bankruptcy and all data concerning his income is being held by receivers.

Dodd Fears World Rushing Into War

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 4 (AP).—William Dodd, American Ambassador to Germany, said today that despite the tragic experience of the World War, the nations of the world, and especially of Europe, are rushing into debt as they arm for another world war that probably will destroy civilization.

A basic objective of some powers is to frighten, even destroy democracies everywhere, he said.

"No man," the statement said, "can say when we shall have another world war; yet no man can know the facts as to the sad Spanish situation or the menacing behaviour of Japan in the Far East and rest easily."

Wallace Merges Land Activities Under One Head

By the Associated Press.

All land use activities of the Agriculture Department—flood control, erosion work, forestry, soil surveys and purchase and use of land—were under a single head yesterday for the first time.

An order from the office of Secretary Wallace designated Milton S. Eisenhower, 38, co-ordinator of land use planning.

Wallace acted, associates said, to place the Agriculture Department in a position to carry out any large flood relief or similar program Congress may approve.

There has been spirited rivalry between the Interior and Agriculture Departments in recent years over overlapping land functions.

Eisenhower, a native of Kansas, entered the Agriculture Department more than ten years ago as an assistant to Secretary Jardine.

'Coal Oil' Proves Whisky, Colored Man Is Arrested

Five gallons of whiskey inadequately concealed in a burlap bag proved the undoing of Albert Butler, colored, 33, of 134 Pierce court northwest, yesterday morning.

Sergt. George Deyoe and Detective William McEwen of the vice squad were parked at First street and Pierce court when Butler appeared out of an alley.

"What have you got there?" McEwen demanded of the man.

"Jes' a can of coal oil. Want to smell it?"

Ten minutes later, Butler was charged with violating the liquor tax act and Deyoe and McEwen listed five gallons of corn liquor on the property slips.

Outside Trustee For Utility Firm

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission voted yesterday to ask Judge William H. Holly of the Federal Court in Chicago to appoint an independent trustee for the Utilities Power & Light Corporation.

The deicsion was made after a private conference in which Floyd B. Odlum, president of Atlas Corporation; Archibald Graustein, of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., and others participated.

Acting Chairman George C. Mathews said Abe Fortas, a commission attorney, will present the recommendation to Judge Holly tomorrow.

Mathews said "the commission feels that the appointment of a trustee not affiliated with any of the interested parties in the case is essential to a proper consideration and solution of the company's problems under the holding act."

Queen in Scotland For 37th Birthday

Crathie, Scotland, Aug. 4 (AP).—Scottish Queen Elizabeth returned with King George VI to the highlands of her youth today for her first birthday anniversary as Queen and the traditional royal holiday at Balmoral Castle.

Scotsmen turned out by thousands to welcome the royal couple on the Queen's thiry-seventh birthday. The kilt-clad King, the Queen and their two little princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, received official greetings from Aberdeen authorities and then motored 50 miles to Balmoral.

The Story of Chicago's Strange 'Custody Kidnaping' in Pictures

'Kidnaped' Donald Horst Returned to 'Parents'.

Children Should Dance for Health and for Pleasure; Should Never Be Allowed to Show Off, Says Teacher

By Malvina Lindsay.

AMBITIOUS mothers of child toe dancers, who since the advent of Shirley Temple have become legion, are as much an anathema to the dancing profession as to the public.

Mme. Sonia Serova, one of the foremost teachers of children's dances, feels strongly on the subject. "I abhor them—these mothers who turn their children into sophisticated brats," she said with a wave of her expressive hands. "A child should above all things be kept young, natural, joyous."

A member of the convention faculty of the Dancing Masters of America, now in session at the Hotel Mayflower, Mme. Serova, out of her 20 years' teaching experience in England, Ireland, Germany, Canada and the United States, is disseminating to younger teachers her gospel of the dance—that it should be a means to health, grace and happiness, never a medium for exhibitionism.

"I won't have them in my classes," she said, "these children who have been trained to show off, to do tricks. They become old too young. Everything is stale to them. They never know the real joy of the dance."

This costume by Jac-Lewis, designer, illustrates the new trend in children's dance outfits. It was made for Mme. Serova's ballet "The Little Old Day" from the song in "The Show Is On."

Dance For Health.

For children, health is the big thing that Mme. Serova sees in dancing. She has accomplished notable results in this line with victims of infantile paralysis.

"Children with infantile paralysis CAN dance," she declared emphatically. "That is, unless the disease is terifically advanced. Dancing besides helping develop such children physically, gives them self-confidence, helps them overcome their feeling that they can't do things."

While all children need teaching in dancing, Mme. Serova points out, just as much as they need instruction in the three R's, yet there are two classes of children particularly in need of it—the child physically handicapped and the one who is especially shy.

"I might also add the child who is boisterous," she said, "I have seen many little girls who were unmanageable become transformed when they found an outlet in dancing for their physical energy."

Eliminating the "awkward age" for girls is one of Mme. Serova's chief concerns. This unhappy period is entirely unnecessary she maintains. "Most children have beautiful bodies," she said, "and if they are watched and trained carefully they can easily retain their beauty and grace through all stages of development."

Age For Beginners.

As to the age for beginning dancing instruction, 3 years is all right, believes Mme. Serova, though she prefers to take children who are 4.

"The chief thing is to get a good teacher—not necessarily an expensive teacher," she said. "A good dancing teacher should know something about the body, should have studied physiology, hygiene, sculpture and should also have a cultural background. Merely knowing dance steps doesn't make a good teacher.

"The parents should see that the child gets a good foundation in dancing and that the program of instruction is carried on systematically. Too many mothers say, 'Oh, I'll let Mary take dancing this year and music next.' They look on dancing as a luxury, a parlor trick, when it is something that is vitally bound up with the future health and happiness of their children.

If all girls were taught to dance, believes Mme. Serova, they would not only get more joy out of life and express themselves with more naturalness and spontaneity, but would be saved many heartaches and social embarrassments in womanhood. Having taught many movie stars—including Miriam Hopkins—to dance and walk and having assisted for many years in the instruction for British court presentations, Mme. Serova is an authority on feminine grace in its social implications.

Women Walk Badly.

"It is sad," she lamented, "to see how few women can wear evening gowns gracefully. I am astounded whenever I go into a ballroom to see so many young women striding about in their evening dresses and so many older ones slumping and swaying their bodies. Most girls walk very badly, if athletic they tend to stride. Older women let their shoulders give and also swing their hips too much. A woman should walk so naturally that as she moves along one should be able to look at her head and not be conscious of what is propelling her.

"I do not mean that children should be taught ballroom dancing to prepare them for future grace. I am opposed to that, because styles change. But they should learn the essentials of the dance—which in my opinion is the ballet routine adapted to their point of view—and then they will naturally go on the ballroom floor or anywhere else, with proper carriage and ease of movement."

In keeping with Mme. Serova's ideas are the costumes designed for her pupils by Jac-Lewis, one of the youngest costume designers in the United States and a former pupil of Armand DuBois, of Paris. These costumes are designed for the dance—to express its spirit, not to show off the child. While Jac-Lewis doesn't absolutely taboo spangles and feathers on child dancers—if the occasion demands them—he emphasizes refinement and good taste in children's costumes.

"The present trend," he said, "is away from cheap, sexy and spectacular costumes for children. We are also getting away from home-made costumes which so often are too elaborate. Children particularly like costumes with long skirts, as they make them feel grown-up. But the chief thing is to make them realize the costume is a means of helping them express the dance."

Hessler.

Learn to dance when you are a child and you won't swing your hips or trip over your evening gown when you grow up, advises Mme. Sonia Serova, who has taught children's dances for 20 years in this country and in Europe.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Dr. Logan Clendening.

Season for Hay Fever.

IN ABOUT a week or two a million or more of our fellow citizens will begin to long for frost.

It is estimated that about 2 per cent of the population has hay fever. But this does not include infants or children. In those who are destined to have it all their lives it seldom shows up before the age of 15. Why, is hard to explain. How many newcomers will there be in the hay fever fold this year? Poor things, what a puzzling experience for them.

Here they have been going along in the summer time just as comfortable as in the winter time, when bingo, on this August 15 or 16 or 17 they begin to sneeze and their eyes begin to burn, and the back of their nose and throat feels as if they should have a rasp to scratch them. And all because the ragweed which has been growing so luxuriantly and on which no relief money has been spent to cut it down, begins to cast its fairy dust upon the air. You never can tell when you are safe. I know one man who had his first attack at 55.

Relief is more available now than formerly. Doctors used to refuse to handle these patients; they thought treatment of such a minor trouble was beneath them. It is a minor trouble only in the sense that people don't die from it. One doctor in New York, Dr. George M. Beard, actually had the nerve to say it was all imaginary.

Nowadays all doctors are ready to give advice to the hay fever victim. Not a few specialize in its treatment. The best remedy is the use of pollen vaccines. If these fail the use of an air-conditioned room or a vacation in the right climate give relief. We will discuss the best resorts for vacation tomorrow.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow of 32 and my home is in a distant State. I have a position here and am well content, having been here two months. I left home because of a very unhappy love affair with a man 11 years my senior, who is a widower. I went with this man over a year and learned to love him very much, as he was so kind and considerate and always tried to do what he thought would make me happy.

* * * *

Last summer after a trip I came home to find him as nice as ever, but shortly afterward I noticed that whenever we went driving or any place, a certain woman (much older than I) trailed us in her car, and at night if we sat in front of my home in his car she would drive by and park up the street and sit there. I asked him if he noticed her or knew who she was. He readily admitted she was a married woman employed where he was working and that he had had an affair with her lasting four years, much to his regret. He said he wanted to get rid of her but could not without losing his job. She had driven him almost insane and threatened him.

* * * *

I did not abuse him when he told the story, nor did I stop seeing him. But she became so bold that my neighbors noticed her driving by my house, watching me, and saying embarrassing things. Although the man continued to be nice to me, things became so unbearable that I was threatened with a nervous breakdown. She started trailing me when I was out alone and even stopped me in the street to talk about the affair. I threatened to tell her husband and she laughed and said he wouldn't believe anyone who tried to slander her; and that if he did, he would only kill my lover.

* * * *

Realizing if I stayed there I might kill myself, as I often thought of doing, I left. Now he is begging me to return and marry him. I have asked him to leave but he says he is already established there and may not get work elsewhere. I fear I can never be happy there where she is, and my better judgment tells me to stay here and forget him. He says if I don't return he will jump in the river. Please answer soon and tell me just what to do. I think if he cared more for me than for the other woman, he would leave, don't you? Gratefully yours, MRS. X.

* * * *

The Thing to Do.

DEAR MRS. X.: Your lover, as you call him, is an out-and-out coward. If he had an ounce of spunk, he would have turned on his former flame long ago and called her bluff. He would have told her to do her worst; and it is probable that she would have slunk baffled and beaten into the shadows. After all, he is no more blackly involved in their outworn affair than she; indeed, not half so much. After all, it is man's prerogative to propose and woman's to dispose; and as a married woman living with her husband I should say she had committed the more deep-dyed crime of the two in indulging in this extra-marital affair.

* * * *

Why should this man put a mere job before his professed love for you? If he truly loved you, with a feeling worthy of the name, do you think he would have stood weakly by while this unscrupulous woman harried and goaded you to the verge of a nervous breakdown and finally drove you out of town? Absolutely not. Whatever fears he, as an indecisive personality, felt for himself would have automatically evaporated in the temperature of a desperate man's concern for the threatened health and happiness of the woman he loved enough to wish to marry.

* * * *

He has shown cowardice in tolerating the woman's bulldozing of himself; in permitting her to humiliate and harass you; in threatening to jump into the river if you don't return, and in refusing to attempt a new start in life elsewhere. The only thing to do, in my opinion, is to hearken to your better judgment and remain where you are—far, far away from this low-principled woman and this chicken-hearted man. How could you possibly hope for happiness while living in the same community with her, knowing she has such a stranglehold on his personality? Though you might marry, she would no doubt find endless ways and petty means of persecuting both of you, with malicious propaganda and taunting words and actions.

* * * *

You have demonstrated rare good sense and resourcefulness in fleeing the scene of this sorry mess, and you should thank Providence on bended knee that already, in the space of two short months, you have won through to a job and a saving measure of contentment. If you stand your ground, refuse to return and put it up to the man to do whatever he thinks best without any advice or exhortation from you, it is very probable he will muster the courage to pull up stakes, find a job here and marry you. If he loves you and has any remnants of real manhood in him, that is what he will do. And if he hasn't the manhood and courage to do that, you are a thousand times better off without him. It would be folly indeed to backtrack into the same old vortex of fear, embarrassment and uncertainty. M. H.

Household Ideas Of Movie Stars Worth Copying

By Carolyn Abbott.

YOU OFTEN ADMIRE Hollywood personages for their attractive personalities, their acting ability and their good looks, but you do not give them credit for having "brains" when it comes to household management and individual ideas about food.

Here are some tips you may take from them:

Thelma Leeds, a recent bride, has completely outfitted her kitchen in delphinium blue equipment down to the last saucepan. This is the favorite shade of the young actress and the newest thing in kitchens.

For a hearty and delicous Sunday night snack, Maxine Jennings places half an avocado on each plate and fills the hollow with scrambled eggs in which canned button mushrooms have been stirred.

For use on fish or meat salads, Katharine Hepburn likes finely chopped pickled onions added to the French dressing.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 4.

THERE has long been around a mistaken notion that the great city of Detroit produces nothing but masses of motor cars. It is high time to point out that it has also turned out the Rogge sisters—Florence and Hattie, two of the foremost mainstays of this town's mighty Radio City Music Hall.

ALICE HUGHES

They've been such since the world's most wondrous theater opened near to five years back. Hattie heads the huge sewing bee that makes the costumes for the 72 girls in the resident ensembles. And Florence, always its ballet director, has just been made one of the producers—5 feet 3 inches of blonde Detroit womanhood—responsible for glorious shows to fill that 140-foot stage, with its magic lights and permanent company of 100! Some job, eh! And Flo's good!

The Rogge girls were discoveries and proteges of the late lamented Roxy, and followed his fortunes to the Music Hall. Florence, in her mid-teens, went to high school by day and twirled professionally by night, and sister Hattie made her ballet dresses. Roxy found them working in Toronto, and from that day on their fortunes were made. Little Flo graduated from dancing herself and began thinking up the numbers for her gang of toe-pointers. Now she rules the 36 members of the Nation's only resident ballet—and puts on a whole show of her own, now and then, and very well.

Florence is married to Joe Dickman, a real estate man, but even when they're spending week-ends at their Yorktown Heights house, she's thinking about new ballet numbers. Poor Joe—another career-husband! I guess he's a bit fed up with ballets. But how Florence loves her work—and Joe, too.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Helena Rubenstein, the beauty tycooness, has just stepped off the boat after a look-see at European faces, and, as is the custom of her gang, brought me a present. Material for slip-covers to hide the rips and wears in my old couch in the parlor. Nothing could please me more . . .

* * * *

The beauteous sales girls at one of upper Fifth Avenyuh's smartest department stores all look as though they were just back from a month on the Newport sands—rich golden brown. Reason? The store has elegant deck chairs on the roof, where the help may relax in the sunshine at lunch time. Hence the tan without sand in the hair! . . .

* * * *

My old friend, Ursula Parrott, who was "Kitty" in the old days when we roomed in the same house ere she got famed with novels, is at her country chateau at Wilton, Conn., suffering a terrific fit of poison ivy, than which there is no more awful pest, when bad. Poor Kit!—I mean Urs! She is a great chow-dog fancier, too.

* * * *

Civic pride all over our beloved land is apt to rise and roar, now that New York reporters claim that Saratoga, our Spa, now vivid with its month of summer racing, holds the national championship for Steady Porch-Sitting. They claim that the wide verandahs of the old frame United States and Grand Union Hotels and the fine old houses on Union Avenue hold rows of sitters who don't move for the whole 30 days! Humph! I'll match the sitters of my home town against those Saratoga swells any day. After all, it takes an oldest inhabitant, not a race visitor, to sit, really!

Virginia Minnigerode Wed to George G. Hume

Virginia Powell Minigerode and George Graham Hume have slightly startled Washington society by the announcement they were married quietly in St. Louis on July 2. The news made known yesterday by Mrs. Hume who is in the Capital for a short stay with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Carter Minnigerode, of 1515 Twenty-ninth street.

The Minnigerodes have had other surprise marriages. It is a little less than a year ago since the bride's sister, Helen Louise Minnigerode, became the bride of Frederick Allen in a civil ceremony in New York a few days before they were scheduled to be married at a large church wedding in Washington. The impossibility of obtaining a joint passport—the Allens went to Europe on their honeymoon—made the civil ceremony practical, although they were married again at St. Margaret's Church here as they had originally planned.

"We haven't yet decided where we will make our home," said Mrs Hume yesterday. "Mr. Hume is now in St. Louis and I plan to join him there shortly."

The bride is a member of one of Washington's best known cave-dweller families. Her uncle, Powell Minnigerode, is director of the Corcoran Art Gallery and her aunt, the late Mrs. Minnigerode Andrews, was for many years a social and civic leader in the Capital. Mr. Hume is the son of George Graham Hume of this city.

Sen. Lodge, Jr., Returns From Beverly, Mass.

He Attended Wedding of Miss Jean Sears to Archibald S. Alexander.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., has returned to Washington from Beverly, Mass., where he attended the wedding of Mrs. Lodge's sister, Jean Sears, to Archibald Stevens Alexander, of Bernardsville, N. J. Mrs. Lodge is remaining in Beverly for a longer stay.

The ceremony, which was witnessed only by members of the families, took place on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, the Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, retired Bishop of Pennsylvania, officiating. The bride, who had no attendants, wore a gown of white organza, made on simple lines, and a short tulle veil. After their wedding trip, Mr. Alexander and his bride will live in Bernardsville.

The latter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears, of Boston, and Beverly. Mr. Alexander, a grandson of Mrs. Charles T. Barney, of New York, and the late Mr. Barney, is a grandnephew of the late William C. Whitney, one-time Secretary of the Navy. Through his paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. H. Otto Wittpen, Mr. Alexander is a member of the Stevens family of Castle Point, Hoboken, founders of the Stevens Institute. 'Barn Dance' Ballet Viewed By Diplomats

Catherine Littlefield's troupe, whose ballet impressions of the United States won unqualified praise abroad this summer, last night drew a foreign diplomatic audience to the Mayflower Hotel's Red Ballroom.

Everywhere the Littlefield dancers performed in Europe this summer they were a sensation. King Leopold broke mourning to see their performance in Brussels. President Lebrun attended opening night in Paris.

Last night they offered "Barn Dance," called the first chapter in the history of American ballet, as part of the international night program of the Dancing Masters of America, who are now meeting here.

Many in the audience also came to see the South American dancer, Ellis Gold, who gave several Mexican and Guatemalan dances in native costume. Ray and Naldi, from the Rainbow Room atop New York's Radio City, gave further zest to the program.

Every box in the ballroom was filled. In a box near the stage were the two daughters of the Chinese Ambassador, Yoeh and Anfu Wang, whose black and white native costumes were as attractive as those of the dancers. They were accompanied by members of the embassy staff.

The Panama Minister and Senora Boyd were there with their daughter. In another box were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Urtegun, the latter wearing a powderblue dress and long pearl necklace. Accompanying them was Ibrahim Seyfullah, of the legation staff, who is soon to leave for his new duties in the Turkish foreign office.

The Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thompsen were in the audience, the latter wearing a flowered gown of red and purple against a white background. Mme. Wijkman, wife of the commercial counselor of the Swedish Legation, wore a dress of white taffeta made with a cape of the same material ruffled at the edges.

Others seen in the audience were Ernest Schlatter, attache of Swiss Legation; Mrs. Sims Snow, accompanied by Mrs. William Beale, mother of Betty Beale; the Charge d'Affaires of the Polish Embassy, Witold Wankowicz; the secretary of the Latvian Legation and Mrs. Smits, who wore red organdy, and Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, who was responsible for the arrangement of the program.

Summer Proves Rush Season for Pilgrim Aides at Cathedral; More Than 300,000 Visit Episcopal Structure Here Each Year

Members Give Half Day Weekly at This Week for Church.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Summer, when most organizations suspend their activities and bid good-by to vacationing members, is "rush season" for the Pilgrim Aides at National Cathedral. If you have visited the cathedral within the past four years, you have found these women there to welcome you and guide you through the building, explaining the symbolism of its beautiful carvings and stained-glass windows.

The aides, of which Mrs. James A. Saltsman is chairman, were organized four years ago by her and Edwin N. Lewis, editor of Cathedral Age, and executive secretary of the cathedral, with Bishop James E. Freeman's co-operation. They are a unique group. No other cathedral in the world has such a volunteer band extending its hospitality to those who come from distant places to visit it. Chester Cathedral, in England, which was one of the first to abolish fees and open its doors to visitors, has volunteers who serve on special occasions, but who are at the cathedral daily from 9 in the morning until 5 in the afternoon.

Thousands Visit Cathedral Yearly

An average of 300,000 visitors is conducted through the church each year. Often there are from 500 to 1,000 a day. In the spring hundreds of school students come together.

When such large groups enter they are invited to sit in the Great Choir of the cathedral while one of the aides explains the general theme of the architecture of the building, how the Creed of the church is exemplified in its construction; how the Bible stories relating to children are used in the designs of the Children's Chapel, and other interesting details which the "pilgrims" will later observe as she leads them on a tour of the edifice. A second aide brings up the rear, answering questions and keeping the crowd moving.

Every year a party of bus drivers visits the Cathedral to brush up on its points of interest. They never conduct their parties through—only the aides act as guides—but on the trip out, they tell the tourists what they may expect to see.

The aides enjoy acting as hostesses to the visitors as much as the "pilgrims" appreciate having them. Sometimes people are reluctant to go through at first, having paid fees for sightseeing visits to other institutions and thinking there must be a charge there, too.

Organization Has Loyal Workers

The active members of the Pilgrim Aides give one morning or afternoon each week at the Cathedral. Mrs. Saltsman assigns their days and they never need be notified or reminded. The only time there is communication between the chairman and other members of the group is when, for some inavoidable reason, one cannot serve and another is asked to shift her day.

On week-ends, Saturdays and Sundays, when the laymen of the church are at liberty from their business offices, they also assist as aides. Three young theological students, Frederic Haskin, jr., Walter F. Hendricks and Roy LeMoyne, too, have been helping during the summer.

Although the Pilgrim Aides is really a women's organization, the small group of men who assist them deserve mention. They include E. H. Backschmid, a member of the Cathedral choir; Capt. Dudley N. Carpenter, U. S. N., Medical Corps, retired; Prof. Will Hutchins, of American University; Thornton Hynson, Col. Glenn I. Jones, United States Air Service Medical Corps, retired; James Lampe, Fred P. Myers, Ogle R. Singleton, Lewis Carlin Towers, William Lancaster, of Alexandria, Va., J. Russell Lowe, E. Hayden Gibbs, of the Cathedral Ushers' Guild; Lieut. Col. F. Granville Munsen, U. S. A.; and John E. Bayless, curator of the National Cathedral Association.

Some of the 15 aides who were charter members are still serving, having missed hardly a day since the beginning. Among them are Mrs. R. Kirkpatrick Noble, Mrs. Thomas Treadwell, Miss Anna Burchard, Miss Helen Grimth and Miss Irene Noble.

The new dean of the cathedral, Noble C. Powell, often finds visitors seeking someone to guide them through the church after 5 o'clock or before the aides arrive at 9 in the morning, and then he himself conducts them, although he is not formally a member of the aides' society.

The members gather once a month during the year for a short business meeting and party. Several members join in entertaining as an individual member acts as hostess. Last year, on the anniversary of the founding of the organization, Bishop Freeman entertained them at luncheon following corporate communion. This year, Dean Powell plans to entertain them.

The members are Mrs. Saltsman, Mrs. Paul R. Greever, wife of Representative Greever; Mrs. James Henderson, wife of the chaplain of St. Alban's School; Mrs. Richard W. Hynson, Mrs. Edwin N. Lewis, wife of the executive secretary of the cathedral; Mrs. Albert Lucas, wife of the headmaster of St. Alban's; Mrs. Raymond L. Wolven, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Freeman; Mrs. George Anderson, Mrs. Harry A. Baldridge, Miss Harriet Black, Mrs. Smith Brookhart, jr., Miss Addie Brown, Miss Burchard, Miss Madge Cook, Mrs. Carl Dow, Mrs. Brent C. Drane, Miss Isabel Erwin, Miss Griffith, Mrs. R. M. Griswold, Mrs. S. L. Henderson, Mrs. Hannah Hill, Mrs. Hoyt Hostutler, Mrs. S. W. Johnson, Mrs. R. C. King, Mrs. Henry F. Kunkel, Mrs. Laidler Mackall, Mrs. H. W. Marlow, Mrs. Morris H. Marlow, Miss Julia McFarland, Mrs. Ruth McRae, Miss Irene Noble, Mrs. R. Kirkpatrick Noble, Mrs. William F. Penniman, Mrs. E. M. Pickens, Mrs. Phillip K. Reily, Mrs. Radph W. Richards, Mrs. Paul B. Richardson, Mrs. J. E. Rolfes, Mrs. Clarence Seward, Miss Lillian J. Soper, Mrs. Carl Stodder, Mrs. Catherine B. Strang, Mrs. Thomas Treadwell, Mrs. Roland Whitehurst, Mrs. P. L. Wilson, Mrs. Yates Wood and Miss Katharine Wynkoop.

Also included among the aides are Mrs. W. F. Adams, Mrs. Madeline Amphlett, Mrs. J. W. Bagley, Mrs. Clyde Brown, Mrs. F. B. Crowther, Mrs. F. W. Garrett, Miss Ruth Miller Green, Miss Sylvia Hiss, Mrs. Guy D. Goff, Mrs. William C. Harrison, Mrs. Marion Howison, Mrs. Fred Kent, Mrs. F. M. Knox, Mrs. Arlington A. Nazis to Paint Jew in History As Tyrannical

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 4.—The opening of the fall school term for millions of children brought to view today an apparent new anti-Semitism drive in German education.

It is centered in a newly published teachers' handbook of anti-Semitism to which is attached quasi-official status through a foreword by Germany's No. 1 anti-Semite, Julius Streicher.

The manual, entitled "The Jewish Question in Teaching," was written by a Nurnberg school counselor, Fritz Fink.

Fink advises teachers they must not simply devote scheduled school time to the racial problem. His manual aims to guide them in injecting "the Jewish angle" into almost every subject in the curriculum.

Suggests Teaching Methods

Fink's thesis is that realization or the importance of race purity and the menace to Germany of Jewish influence in politics, religion, art, literature and morals must come to the pupil gradually through appropriate emphasis on "the Jewish angle" wherever it occurs.

Thus, he suggests, it is possible to tell children even in the most elementary history instruction about ancient Egypt: what it suffered through the Jews; how the Jews then conquered Palestine, "slaughtering natives" and "transforming into a desert a land which formerly flowed with milk and honey."

Even the smallest children, he advises, can be told of "the Jewish conspiracy in Persia," where a "blood bath" was organized under the leadership of the beautiful Esther to kill thousands of King Ahazuerus' loyal subjects.

Blamed for Rome's Fall.

Children studying ancient Rome in primary and secondary schools, Fink declares, should understand clearly that it was the Jews, after their dispersion, who penetrated all quarters of the Roman empire and eventually caused its downfall.

Medieval and modern history, he tells teachers, should be taught with special emphasis on the "desperate struggles" of the Spanish, Polish and German peoples against Jewish domination.

It should be pointed out, he adds, that "wherever revolution upsets the established order, from the great French revolution on down to the present day," Jews are found.

In teaching children the lives of great men, Fink points out, stress should be laid on those who had the courage "to tell the truth about the Jews."

Names Christ, Napoleon.

Among them the handbook cites the Galilean Prophet, Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified by the Jews; the historian Tacitus, the religious reformer Martin Luther, King Frederick the Great of Prussia; Napoleon Bonaparte, Prince Otto von Bismarck and Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

The manual cautions that no biology instruction is complete without emphasis on the deterioration of a race through mixtures of alien blood.

Fink suggests that younger children be made to understand the care animal trainers give to pure breeding and that older children be taught the meaning of "racial turpitude" and why it is a prison offense in Germany for a Jew to live with a non-Jewish woman.

Even in elementary art instruction, the teachers are told, children can be encouraged to develop their perception of racial differences by including Jewish races in their drawings. Several examples are reproduced in the handbook.

Gas Is Inhuman War Weapon, Roosevelt Says

Denies Chemical Service New Name, Hopes to See It Abolished.

With a strong message against the "inhuman" use of chemicals in warfare, President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed a bill to change the name of the Army's "Chemical Warfare Service" to the "Chemical Corps."

"I hope the time will come when the Chemical Warfare Service can be entirely abolished," he wrote in his veto message. "It has been and is the policy of this Government to do everything in its power to outlaw the use of chemicals in warfare," he added. "Such use is inhuman and contrary to what modern civilization should stand for."

The bill was introduced at the request of the War Department and passed without major difficulty. War Department spokesmen asserted the present term is redundant; that other branches of the service do not have the term "Warfare" in their titles; that the present name is awkward. They did not regard the measure of any practical value, however, and were not alarmed at its veto.

"I am doing everything in my power to discourage the use of gasses and other chemicals in any way between nations," the President wrote. "While, unfortunately, the defensive necessities of the United States call for study of the use of chemicals in warfare, I do not want the Government of the United States to do anything to aggrandize or make permanent any special bureau of the Army or the Navy engaged in these studies."

The President also said that the major functions of the Chemical Warfare Service are those of a "service" rather that a "corps." He said only supply branches of the Army should be designated as "corps."

Whalen Quits Scramble to Be Mayor Nominee

Anti-Tammany Democrat Throws Support to Judge.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 4.—Grover A. Whalen, dapper anti-Tammany Democratic candidate for mayor, tonight announced his withdrawal from the primary race in favor of Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney.

The designee of the Democratic leaders of four New York City counties, Whalen wrote them a letter saying "Judge Mahoney is far better equipped than I to wage a fight against the interests which have succeeded in securing temporary possession of Tammany Hall (Manhattan Democratic organization) and are striving to dominate the Democratic organization in the other four boroughs and to secure control of the City of New York.

Whalen's announcement was the latest of several startling developments that have marked efforts to wrest the city hall from Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, fusion incumbent.

First Tammany Hall selected anti-New Deal Senator Royal S. Copeland, whose principal hall advocate, former Tammany Chieftan James J. Dooling, died only a few days after the selection, leaving Copeland's strength in doubt. Tammany's factions rallied around the anti-New Deal standard and selected U. S. Representative Christopher Sullivan as Dooling's successor.

Meanwhile James J. Hines, powerful Harlem District leader and long one of Tammany's leading figures, "seceded" and joined forces with the county leaders of Queens, Kings, Richmond and the Bronx—Frank V. Kelly, Edward J. Flynn, James C. Sheridan and William T. Fetherston—behind Whalen.

Mahoney, a district leader in Tammany, drew international attention in 1935 and 1936 by his opposition to the participation by the United States in the Olympic games, because they were being held in Germany.

Copeland Still Trying.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, last night indicated that the withdrawal of Grover A. Whalen from the campaign for the New York City Democratic nomination would not affect his own efforts to obtain the office.

Winners at Bridge.

Fuller, of New York, were crowned champions of the national women's pairs. Mrs. M. R. West and Mrs. James Lemon, Washington, D. C., placed second.

Committee to Recommend Loophole Plugs in Tax Law to Both Houses at Session Today.

PLUGS FOR TAX LOOPHOLES will be recommended to the two houses of Congress today by their joint committee, Chairman Doughton, of North Carolina, said. Doughton added that the Ways and Means Committee, which he also heads, will begin brief hearings Monday on a bill.

The report generally is expected to suggest more drastic taxation of domestic and foreign personal holding corporations, nonresident aliens, incorporated hobbies and multiple trusts.

Doughton said the hearings of the Ways and Means Committee would be confined to the matter in the report and that he hoped to conclude them in "a few days."

Treasury officials probably will appear first to explain the proposed tax law revisions, he said, and individuals interested in them will be given an opportunity to testify afterward.

HOUSE CONCURRENCE in a Senate amendment completed congressional action on Alabama's plan to obtain $3,000,000 of Federal road funds for freeing its toll bridges.

The measure authorizes the Bureau of Public Roads to refund to a State half the original cost of a bridge built on a Federal aid highway if tolls are lifted on the span by 1939. It applies also to bridges already freed.

Virtually all the immediate payments would be made to Alabama, which has made 15 bridges toll-free since the spring of 1936. The bill was introduced by Senator Hugo L. Black and Representative Sam Hobbs, of Alabama.

REPRESENTATIVE DICKSTEIN (Democrat), of New York, told the House a Nazi camp would be opened near Milwaukee Sunday.

He read a telegram from an undisclosed informant asserting that Camp Hindenburg would be established 20 miles north of Milwaukee and that troops in uniform would be on hand.

Saying he never had heard of the place where the camp is to be located, Representative O'Malley (Democrat), of Wisconsin, asked for the name of the sender of the telegram.

Dickstein replied: "You are a little unreasonable to ask me to disclose a spy among their own people."

"It's all very mysterious," O'Malley retorted.

Embassy Picketing Ban Bill Reported to Senate

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday reported the Pittman resolution to prohibit picketing of embassies and legations. A similar resolution was reported Tuesday by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The legislation was asked by Secretary Hull, who said his department had long been "embarrassed" by demonstrations in front of embassies and legations.

Mistake-Slayer' Died of Poison Autopsy Shows

Ralph H. Bryant, 32-year-old "mistake-slayer" of his sister-in-law, killed himself by swallowing poison, Arlington County Coroner W. C. Welburn decided last night.

Dr. Welburn said his verdict was based on an examination of the contents of Bryant's stomach in an autopsy performed after his body was found yesterday 100 yards from where, according to Arlington authorities, he pumped two fatal bullets into the body of Mrs. Naomi E. Blazek, whom he mistook for his estranged wife.

The means by which Bryant ended his tragedy in suicide had been suggested earlier in evidence found with his body.

His fully-loaded revolver was found beside him. Nearby were three empty shells and three loaded ones. There was no bullet-hole indicating he shot himself. Beside the body was a small liquor bottle, containing a few drops of a liquid officers said definitely was not liquor.

The first half of the double tragedy occurred Tuesday night at the Blazek home, 719 South Glebe road, Arlington. Reconstructing the crime, police believe Mrs. Blazek, 34, attractive Arlington County club woman, answered Bryant's knock at the rear door. When she saw him, she ran screaming out of the house.

Mrs. Bryant, who obtained a limited divorce a year ago, was standing in the shadow at the time. Police said the kitchen was dimly lit, and the two sisters are similar in appearance.

Suicide Threats.

Officer M. F. Ward found the body of Bryant early yesterday. When no cause of his death was apparent, Dr. Welburn ordered an autopsy. Verdicts probably will be issued immediately afterward.

Bryant is believed to have been unemployed at the time, and was living in an abandoned garage in Clarendon. Police were told at his former address here he had threatened to kill himself.

Mrs. Bryant is an employe of a Clarendon beauty shop. Her brother-in-law, Jerry W. Blazek, is a former lietenant in the Marine Corps and at present manager of a Washington wholesale meat company. He was not at home when the slaying occurred Tuesday night.

Girl Clerks To Help Set Minimum Pay

Employes, Owners and Public Each to Send 3 to Conference.

District Minimum Wage Board members last night explained provisions of the revived wage law to a mass meeting of shop girls in the Labor Department Auditorium.

The meeting was the first of an educational series designed to acquaint the 20,000 women employed by retail stores with their rights under the law. About 275 women were present to hear Arthur L. Schoenthal, board member; Mrs. William Kittle, board chairman, and Miss Gwen Geach, board secretary, detail the law's provisions and ask the shop girls to elect representatives to a wage conference.

Schoenthal, the principal speaker, told the women that it was up to them to elect representatives to help set the new minimum wage. He explained the wage would first be set by a nine-member conference, composed of three employe representatives, three employer representatives and three representatives of the public. This conference, he said, would submit a tentative minimum wage to the board for approval.

May Hold "Primaries."

When the meeting was over and a scattering of questions from the floor had been answered, Mrs. Kittle said that in order to give the employes fair representation in the conference it might be necessary to hold "primary" elections in the various stores. Occasion for this might arise, she said, because the employes are unorganized and are unaware of one another's capabilities.

It was explained that similar conferences of employer, employe and public representatives will be held before the board arrives at a minimum wage to be set in any particular field. Schoenthal told the meeting that the law would affect all women 18 years old or over engaged in business or industry. It would not affect domestic servants, he said.

While only six questions were asked from the floor, Miss Geach, board secretary, said that many had been sent to her through the mail.

Not Now in Effect.

Most common point of inquiry, she said, was whether any minimum wage law is in effect now. She explained that none was yet set.

Urging the girls to be careful in their selection of representatives, Miss Geach suggested that an unmarried woman depending upon her own earnings might be most satisfactory in presenting the employe's case.

Mrs. Kittle announced tht another meeting of the group will be held next Wednesday night at the Labor Auditorium. Employe representatives may be chosen at that time.

Police to Insure Garbage Hauling If Strike Develops

Policemen will be placed on garbage trucks to protect workers if a threatened walkout of District garbage collectors makes such measures necessary, a high official declared yesterday.

"Health and sanitation are of paramount importance to us," he said, refusing to be quoted by name. "We will use every means to maintain a healthy city."

A strike was threatened by the collectors' union last week after two men were disciplined for using profane language before a housewife. Meanwhile, a report upholding a trial board's exoneration of William R. Wood, superintendent of collectors, of charges brought by his subordinates, was filed yesterday with the commissioners.

The official said he feared the report might not be favorably received by the men.

Privilege Restored To Columbia Cabs

A temporary restraining order against the District Commissioners and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, signed yesterday by Justice James M. Proctor in District Court, restored hacking privileges to 25 suspended taxi drivers of the Columbia Cab Association.

The drivers had been ordered to surrender their permits and license plates after a $350 Municipal Court judgment revealed the association carried no accident liability insurance.

Eight members of the cab concern who were served with suspension notices, however, must pay the judgment and post $11,000 insurance for each cab before they will again be permitted to operate. The 25 drivers named in the restraining order must post bonds totaling $1,000 before resuming their taxi business.

Coast Guard Observes Its 147th Thrill-Packed Birthday; Morgenthau Hails Its Years of Heroism and Honor

A member of the crew of the wrecked schooner W. H. Reinhardt goes ashore in a breeches buoy and the Coast Guard saves another life.

The Coast Guard, which started as a revenue cutter service, celebrated its 147th anniversary yesterday.

Secretary Morgenthau and Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, the commandant, in greetings to the personnel, praised the splendid record which has always been "marked by honor."

The revenue cutter service was established by the first Congress in 1790 upon the recommendation of the first Secretary of the Treasury, Alexander Hamilton, to President George Washington.

The present-day Coast Guard is a combination of the former revenue cutter service and the lifesaving service. The lifesaving service was not the creation of a single act of Congress, but the result of several enactments, dating back to 1848, having for their purpose the saving of life and property from the perils of the sea along the coasts of the United States.

In 1915 Congress decided it would be more advantageous to amalgamate both services into one.

Organized as a military service, the Coast Guard vessels are armed, and officers and men are trained for war as well as schooled in their peacetime tasks.

In peace the "knights of the sea" operate under the Treasury Department; in war, control passes to the Secretary of the Navy.

The personnel at present is made up of 477 permanent commissioned officers, with temporary commissioned officers, 593 chief warrant and warrant officers, 152 temporary warrant officers and 8,928 petty officers and enlisted men.

The Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., maintained for training and instruction of cadets, is similar to the cadet instruction of men at West Point and Annapolis.

Records of every assignment are kept at the Coast Guard headquarters in Washington. Each page of the report could very well be the basis for a Joseph Conrad novel.

One of the most effective devices used by the Coast Guard for shipwrecked vessels is the breeches buoy. A typical case of rescue in which the apparatus was employed:

"On January 19, 1933, the lumber schooner Tiverton stranded 1-mile from the Humbolt Bay (Calif.) Coast Guard station, and became a total loss. The crew of that station proceeded to the scene and by use of the breeches buoy was instrumental in rescuing the entire crew of 19 persons, who otherwise in all probability would have lost their lives."

The United States has more than 10,000 miles of coast line to guard. Much of it is wild, desolate country with few seaports and a scanty population. And yet no coast in the world offers more hope to the sailor in distress. No matter how savagely the hurricane may blow or how thick the fog, the Coast Guard will get him and put him safe ashore if it is humanly possible.

Last year several hundred American vessels met with disaster on or near these coasts. Thirty-seven thousand persons on board ships were assisted. More than 7,000 lives were saved.

Following the disastrous hurricanes which swept Florida in September and November, 1935, 20 Coast Guard vessels and six airplanes carried relief supplies to survivors, conducted surveys of stricken areas and assisted the Red Cross and local and Federal agencies in their relief work.

Every year, on the anniversary of the Titanic disaster, the Coast Guard holds church services for those who lost their lives, at the exact latitude and longitude position of the tragedy. Since April 14, 1912, when the Titanic struck an iceberg and went down, there has not been a major catastrophe off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland because of the Coast Guard's vigilance.

The part the Coast Guard played in the World War would fill volumes. The service has made an honorable record in every American war, and its military history is in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the Nation.

New Lanes On K Street Are Planned

Included on $500,000 Program, Sultan Reveals.

Widening of K street into a three-lane thoroughfare will become a reality next spring, Commissioner Dan I. Sultan indicated yesterday, after the Senate passed the District tax bill. This and other street improvements will cost $500,000.

Architects will begin drawing plans soon for the revolution change in the street, converting it into one of the city's main East-West highways. Advance plans call for two 20-foot thoroughfares to run parallel to the present street, from Twelfth street to Connecticut avenue.

The secondary streets will be laid down between buildings and the rows of trees on K street, with the trees left standing in long narrow lawns. Sidewalks will be narrowed somewhat.

To Widen Twelfth Street.

Secondary parallel highways will be used by persons having business on the street, while the present thoroughfare will be used for through traffic. K street at present is one of the heaviest-traveled streets in Washington, and expansion of its capacity is urgently needed, Sultan said.

Another large street improvement which will come out of the $500,000 raised by the new gasoline tax will be the widening of Twelfth street from New York avenue to Massachusetts. Twelfth street is widened as far north as New York avenue.

Blair road will be paved from Underwood street to Peabody, and Kennedy street will be repaved from Third to Colorado avenue.

Circle Changes Omitted.

Changes in Dupont, Thomas and Scott circles which have been discussed for some time are not on the 1938 program and probably will not be reached until 1939, Col. Sultan said. He also is hopeful of getting action on a K street viaduct in 1939.

Before the $500,000 will be available, a request for it will have to be approved by the Bureau of the Budget, after which Congress must pass a deficiency appropriation to cover the expense of the street program. Sultan said yesterday he was "fairly confident" the Budget Bureau would approve the proposal and Congress would also ratify it.

Fidelity Action Asked at Once Of Depositors

Receiver Warns 16,000 It Will be Liquidated if Not Reorganized.

Liquidation of assets of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association must proceed in a short time unless depositors develop a plan for reorganization, James H. Nolan, receiver, warned yesterday in an open letter to the 16,000 depositors.

Nolan described the battle between the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Comptroller of the Treasury over what should and what should not be stated in a proposed poll of depositors, which was taken. The letter asked them just how much money they expected to withdraw and how much they expected to leave on deposit in the event of reorganization.

The receiver stated that $1,500,000 in cash was on hand, and that it would permit an immediate 30 per cent payoff in the event of liquidation. He added unofficially that a similar payoff could be expected six months after the first dividend.

Fidelity's tangled affairs became more complex with revelation the F. H. L. B. and the Treasury were at odds as to the wording of the proposed letter to be sent out in the poll. F. H. L. B. wanted to mail a brief one-page statement. The Treasury wanted to mail a longer four-page statement. On this the chances of forming a new bank split, the receiver's statement revealed.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Mark Bullis, who has been attempting to draw together the alienated principals in the case, announced yesterday she had obtained a promise from the board of directors of the F. H. L. B. to attend a conference at the office of the Comptroler within a few days. She represents a depositors' committee. She also has obtained the promise of Harry Somerville, president of the First Federal Savings & Loan, to attend. Somerville withdrew from negotiations to sell the assets of Fidelity to First National because of the dispute betwen F. H. L. B. and the Comptroller.

Nolan's letter reviewed in detail the history of Fidelity since it closed a year ago July 18.

He said the cost of the receivership was "less than 2 per cent" of the total face value of the assets, which have not yet been completely appraised.

Nolan explained that complete liquidation would require "a few years." He could not be sure exactly how many.

Police Seize Robbery Suspect Leaving Home in Chevy Chase

A short, heavy-set, middle-aged man walked out of a home in Chevy Chase last night carrying a small suitcase, and, after a tussle with a detective and a chase of two blocks, gave the police department the first break of an almost unprecedented drive to end a major crime wave.

At headquarters the suspect, 54 years old, and giving an address in the 900 block of New York avenue northwest, calmly posed for photographers and told police he had been arrested twice in Washington and had served a short sentence in Sing Sing.

According to Detectives Eugene Lambert and Richard Feller of the Eighth Precinct, who made the arrest, the man virtually walked into their arms as they were watching a house recently ransacked of its valuables in the 3800 block of Livingston street northwest.

Police said they found a .38-caliber revolver with 6 rounds of ammunition in the man's clothing, together with five watches and a pair of colored eyeglasses.

The suspect told police he was a watchmaker, thus accounting for his possession of the watches, but in the suitcase he carried, pliers, a long screwdriver and other tools were found and the prisoner was taken to headquarters for fingerprinting and then locked up without charge.

In the last 48 hours more than $5,000 has been added to the "take" of D. C. robbers.

Detective Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, at a loss to explain the increasing number of petty crimes, has ordered armed detectives on the streets in cruisers as early as 7 p. m.

Reports for a 24-hour period ending at 8 a. m. yesterday showed that 32 burglaries had been committed and that thieves had made off with $3,721 in money, jewelry and property. No arrests were listed yesterday.

More than $500 worth of leather goods and sundries were taken from Camalier & Buckley's Leather Goods Shop, 1141 Connecticut avenue northwest, Charles Camalier reported yesterday. The store was broken into through a rear door and the place ransacked.

Woman Amnesia Victim.

Found near the Navy Yard, she gave her name haltingly as Molly Talbert. She is about 5 feet tall and weighs 100 pounds. Her hair is bobbed. She wore a brown and white cotton dress, black shoes.

Keith's Offers Ace Melodrama Of Gilded Era

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE TOAST OF NEW YORK," RKO-Radio picturization of a story suggested by books by Bouck White and Matthew Josephson, adapted to the screen by Dudley Nichols, John Twist and Joel Sayre, starring Edward Arnold, with Frances Farmer, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie, Donald Meek, Thelma Leeds, Clarence Kolb, Billy Gilbert, Lionel Belmore, Dewey Robinson, Stanley Fields and George Irving. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Previewed Monday, Aug. 2. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

It was every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost in those "good old days" of the "gilded era" of American finance, if the disclosures of "The Toast of New York" are to be accepted at face value.

Immediately following the War Between the States, it seems, the best financial minds in Wall street looked upon it as strictly ethical—or at least ethical enough for all practical purposes—to sell out their best friends, "slaughter" their enemies in cold blood, and colder bonds, and otherwise indulge a lust for gold and more gold and the power it could bring.

Foremost among these "robber barons" of "the street" was Jim Fisk, who rose from medicine show peddler through the South to dominance of New York's financial Titans and almost a corner on the gold supply of the entire country. It is the adult biography of Jim Fisk with which "The Toast of New York" principally concerns itself. While the general plan and structure of "The Toast of New York" and "Diamond Jim" are the same, it is a more variegated character that Edward Arnold is called upon to impersonate in the present picture than in the earlier study of Broadway's greatest salesman and playboy.

Had Money Instinct.

Jim Fisk, apart from his instinctive money sense, was a simple fellow. He was passionately fond of gay uniforms and subject to strange moods and impulses; he was ostentatious, gruff, gentle, sensitive and impervious to personal hurt, all at once. He strangled his opponents in the market to shower money and jewels on Josie Mansfield, the music hall artiste's maid, who aspired to become a great actress and whom Fisk met through a bit of bogus coin-flipping; he defied his government and the mob at his door with equal indifference and died of a bullet shot from that mob, knowing that the woman he adored did not love him and that his partner, Boyd, had been right from the outset.

Such, in skeletonized form, is the basis of events that are visualized with picturesqueness, far-flung grandeur and a high degree of realism on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater this week. "The Toast of New York" is a big picture, executed with an unfailing regard for the niceties of detail that make it obvious at once that RKO-Radio realized they were dealing with a subject out of the ordinary.

The expert photography that characterizes the film has brought the rococco elegance of smart New York life in the '60's into vivid and bold relief. The most imposing suites in the old Astor House, precursor of the present-day Hotel Astor on Times Square, are a museum of quaint gimcracks and jewjaws that went, I believe, by the name of bric-a-brac. The theaters, the streets, the equipages in which the aristocrats of the day rode, the harbor, the dwarfed skyline of the city that was destined to rear its spires into the clouds, all are brought to view and to life with a fine fidelity to the spirit and the period of the story.

Rich in Romance.

"The Toast of New York," of course, derives its name from Josie Mansfield, the one love of Jim Fisk's life. It is this romance that presents the gentler side of the man who away from Josie was battling for stakes that ran into the millions in a day when "thousands" was still a big word.

One wonders, now and again, whether "Uncle" Daniel Drew, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt and the rest of the money barons of the day were prey for quite such transparent schemes as some that Fisk sprung upon them, but, whether or no, the contrasting natures of embattled men makes for good melodrama and high excitement. "The Toast of New York" has both.

In Jim Fisk, Edward Arnold has easily the best of the biographical roles he has essayed for the cameras. He plays the part with gusto, braggadocio and considerable noise, but he also imbues it with a robust honesty of treatment that causes one, a good deal of the time, to admire a dishonest rogue. His two partners are played by Cary Grant and Jack Oakie, with Mr. Grant having all the better of it. Frances Farmer is a beautiful, if icy, Josie Mansfield, and Thelma Leeds, a music hall star who picks the wrong man—or, rather, permits the wrong man to pick her.

Climax After Climax.

Clarence Kolb is a lithe and energetic Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, intent on acquiring "Uncle" Daniel Drew's ferryboats and Erie Railroad—which he does—but it seems to me that Donald Meek, as the sanctimonious Drew, is a little too much on the side of the cringing suppliant for crumbs from the rich man's table.

The development of the story abounds in climaxes that are both dramatically impressive and flippantly amusing. On the one hand may be cited that ominous day in Wall Street known down through the years as "Black Friday," precipitated by Fisk's lust for gold; on the other, the fire-hose defense of "Fort Taylor," after Fisk and Drew have fled to Jersey to prevent Vanderbilt's serving an attachment on millions in gold. There is nothing of the laggard about "The Toast of New York." It plunges along at breakneck speed, with never any cessation of interest or slackening of pace.

Last night's premiere of the picture at RKO-Keith's was lent a "period" touch by "gilded era" embellishments that were dug up out of the past—kerosene torches, instead of floodlights; a four-in-hand stage coach to convey the debutantes to the theater in the crinoline garb of the '60s, music of the bygone day, etc. etc.

The Pathe News is the only auxiliary of a major feature so rich in entertainment that it needs no supplementaries of any kind to satisfy an audience.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Now Is the Time When All Showmen Come Thru With Stacks of Titles and Casts for Their Plays

Every Mail Brings the New Season of Living Drama Closer by Many Labels and Swarms of "Names;" "Dream" for Sylvan Theater Fourth Time; Mr. Bergman Hops in and Out; Jack Powell Drumming Up Trade in Europe; "Dodd" Vs. "Deeds;" Notes.

ONE begins to suspect that there is to be a theatrical season of 1937-'38. It has required only two bulletins to tip us off, we are that quick to catch on—one from C. P. Greneker, chief stentor for the Shuberts; the other from Willard Keefe, cymbal-whanger for the Center Theater, Radio City, New York.

BELL.

Mr. Greneker announces so many new productions in prospect around his camp on Broadway that we will be lucky merely to get them named in this space.

There is, first off, as the saying shouldn't go, "The Three Waltzes." Nothing more than its composership seems necessary to recommend this one. It was written by practically all of the Strausses—the elder Johann, Johann, jr., and Oscar. A hit in London and expected to be on this side.

In lighter musical vein will come "Hooray for What," bringing Ed Wynn back to the living theater; "Between the Devil," with Jack Buchanan, Evelyn Laye and Adele Dixon; the new "Ziegfeld Follies of 1938," perhaps restoring the strip-tease to Gypsy Rose Lee (Yes, the same one—Louise Hovick of the films); "Balalaika," "Yippi," "Die Kerzenlicht," a musical play from the German, and, in 1938 Eddie Cantor's return to the boards for the first time since 1929, when he played "Whoopee."

On the dramatic side are "The Alien Earth," "Ma Liberte," "The Housemaster," "Daleby Deep" and "Honor Bright." That is a fair showing, if they all get into production, as does not always happen.

Now take this Mr. Keefe, on the other hand, and you discover that he is interested in only one production. That, however, seems an admirable one that well might occupy the entire attention of any first-rate tub-thumper. It is a piece named "Virginia" and in subject matter no more than the width of the Potomac distant from Washington.

"Virginia" will open at the Center Theater, Rockefeller Center, on the night of August 31. It is a strictly American musical romance, with book contrived by those two seasoned playwrights, Laurence Stallings and Owen Davis. Arthur Schwartz, another veteran who knows his way around, wrote the music. The story concerns the adventures of a troupe of players from the Drury Lane Theater, London, in the Colonial settlement of Williamsburg, Va.

The authors are said to have selected this locale and period because it provided them with a musical romance to all intents and purposes ready made. Research disclosed that Colonial Virginia's social life in 1774 could be transported to the stage almost without revision and presented as colorful pageantry. Added to this were the intrigue of the colonists against the laws of George III, the first uprisings in New England and the divided sympathies of the British settlers—all made to order for heroic drama.

Not only will there be a lustrous new season, but it is opening earlier than has been the case in a decade.

• • • •

As an afterthought, something might be said of the cast to appear in "Virginia." England has furnished Anne Booth, prima donna; Nigel Bruce, comedian; Bertha Belmore, comedienne, and Charles Romano. From Canada comes Gene Lockhart, another comedian, and from Australia, Mona Barrie, a musical comedy beauty, known best in America for her screen appearances. South Africa is represented by Dennis Hoey, who, though England-born, has had a successful career in the British outposts; Russia, by Valia Valentinoff and Scotland by Ronald Graham, barytone leading man. And what of America? Here they come: Lansing Hatfield, barytone; Tom Tempest, Patricia Bowman, Washington's prima ballerina; Buck and Bubbles, last seen in "Porgy and Bess," and Avis Andrews. There will be a mixed chorus, ballet unit of 32 and Will Vodrey's Negro Choir in addition to all of these.

• • • •

The ninth Festival Program in the National Sylvan Theater next Tuesday night at 8, will mark the fourth successive annual production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," as enacted by the Washington Players, under the direction of Bess Davis Schreiner. Arthur Rhodes will assist Miss Schreiner as guest director, and the Louise Hunter Dancers will play an important part in the production.

An extra Festival Program will be given tonight, under the auspices of the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks, when the bill will be Justin Huntley McCarthy's fifteenth century play of "If I Were King," presented by the Blackfriars Guild. In case of inclement weather, the performance will be postponed until tomorrow night.

Two wayfaring gentlemen dropped into the National Capital from New York late Monday night—or was it early Tuesday morning?—to see about those new chairs that are supposed to go down this month in the National Theater. One of the visiting firemen was Manager Eddie Plohn, of the National, who had snuck away to Broadway from the Variety Club for a day or two; the other, his boss, Leonard Bergman, managing executor of the A. L. Erlanger estate, owner of a majority interest in the National. Mr. Plohn came home to go to work; Mr. Bergman came down for the ride.

Those who contend that American vaudeville and variety artists—if there is any difference, which I doubt—have no chance to get anywhere professionally in Europe, should take a look at Jack Powell's booking sheet.

Jack is that blackface syncopationist who does a single act and drums on everything in sight from the back of his chair to the sides of the proscenium, the floor and the shining cranium of the bald-headed violinist in the orchestra. Jack has been on the other side, working continuously, ever since his appearance here at Loew's Capitol months ago. The "drummer boy" doesn't seem to have any trouble doing all right for himself, wherever he is.

A card from him in London mailed July 27, says, "Just a few words to say 'hullo,' as I am on my way to Copenhagen. I play the Arena there for the whole month of August."

Heralded as something new in screen musical comedy, "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air" comes to the Earle Theater a week from tomorrow, with Kenny Baker playing the title role in the latest film play from the pen of the author of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." Mervyn LeRoy is responsible for the production and has brought along in it one or two who showed promise in "The King and the Chorus Girl," his first independent release. One of these is Kenny Baker; another Jane Wyman. Besides these two, there appear Frank McHugh, Allee Brady and Gertrude Michael. There are five new songs by Warren and Dubin. Now, if "Mr. Dodd" is just half as good as "Mr. Deeds"...

• • • •

Drawing-the-Diagram Note.

Maybe He Shouldn't Have Called!

Louise Hovick—yes, she's the one, nee Gypsy Rose Lee—seems not too much perturbed, but that Harry Ritz fellow, of the Three Ritz Brothers, might start most anything, and usually does. This is an agitated moment snapped from a scene in "You Can't Have Everything," the new Twentieth Century-Fox musical comedy, scheduled for national release this week.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 4. — Settin' Around (Warner Brothers): If you want to see the aristocracy of Hollywood "with their hair down," contrive to eat lunch in a studio cafe. Free from the stares of the curious audience that is always present in a fashionable Boulevard spot, the players act like a pack of hilarious school kids. They wander from table to table, shout greetings at the top of their voices, play practical jokes on one another and drop completely the reserve they are forced to wear in public.

JOAN BLONDELL.

Today, in Warner Brothers' "Green Room" Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, whose marriage, having lasted nearly a year, is already accepted as a Hollywood institution, were carrying on like a pair of honeymooners. Errol Flynn and Warren William, redhot yachting addicts, were arguing noisily about the merits of their respective boats. Hugh Herbert, lunching with Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh and Craig Reynolds, told a story that caused a sudden gale of laughter. I have never lunched in such an atmosphere of bedlam—and I have never seen pepole having a better time.

It is the same, day after day in the Green Room. Stars and directors who have been working under nerve-racking tension all morning come there more to relax and laugh than to eat.

"Expensive Husbands," co-starring Beverly Roberts and Patric Knowles, has been, to date, a Jinx Picture—one long nightmare of accidents. An electrician fell from the lofty cat-walk and was seriously injured. Beverly Roberts sprained her ankle and had no soner recoverd than she cut her arm severely on broken glass and had to spend two days in bed. Pat Knowles turned up with such a bad case of sunburn that he was invalided home. And today, while I was on the set, Beverly would have been killed or maimed had it not been for the quick thinking and courage of Martha Giddings, her wardrobe girl. Beverly was sitting near the 1,000 pound michrophone boom, talking, when the contraption suddenly toppled over. She didn't see the danger and would have been struck full in the face had not the Giddings girl sprung forward and taken the blow on her shoulder. I am afraid she was badly hurt. They rushed her to the hospital for X-rays and it was a shaken troupe that went on with the day's work.

While chatting with Olivia de Havilland on the set where "The Great Garrick" is being filmed, we were interrupted by a fan magazine writer. "It's been a couple of years and I don't suppose you remember me," he began—and was flabbergasted when Olivia not only named the place where they had met and the person who introduced them but also recalled the subject of their conversation. "Really," she said, "you don't do me justice—I have a remarkable memory." But pride goes before a fall. A few minutes later, playing a scene with Brian Aherne, she suddenly stopped, blushed and stammered. I'm sorry," she admitted, "We'll have to do it over. I guess I've forgotten my lines."

Dick Foran and Robert Armstrong, playing firemen in "Two Platoons," have lost their boyish enthusiasm for fighting fires. They were on location in one of the city's fire stations, using professional smoke-eaters as extras. Midway through a scene, the fire alarm sounded and the firemen went into action. Dick and Bob jumped into the Chief's car and went along to "see" the fun. "A fine picnic was had," Dick mourned. "It was a big brush fire in the Hollywood Hills. A fire warden shoved a wet gunny sack and a spade into my hands and told me to get busy—and I figured he meant it. You can have the romantic life of a fireman. It isn't romantic. It's just hot!"

Roach, Jr., Follows Example of Father

Hal Roach, jr., has started to learn the film business at his famous father's studio in Culver City. After graduating with honors from Culver Military Academy in Indiana, the youngster is working as second assistant director of the "Our Gang" comedies. There is a sentimental significance to the new job. Sixteen years ago the producer started the juvenile features because of the inspiration of Hal, jr. Now the "Our Gang" comedies are the oldest single unit in motion pictures and remain the only short subjects on the Hal Roach Studios' production schedule.

Six Thrills.

Ranger Scores 3d Straight Victory Over Endeavour II in Cup Series

The Washington Post Sports

* X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1937 17

Challenger Mile Behind At the End

Series May End Today as Vanderbilt All But Clinches Trophy.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 4.—Britain's big blue challenger for the America's Cup, Endeavor 2d couldn't do more than make it closer today, even with the lead taken out of her semma going feet and consequently took her third straight ocean-going defeat from Ranger.

Gaining virtually all of his victorious margin on a record-breaking 15-mile beat to windward over a 30-mile course, the American skipper brought his big white ghost ship home in front once more with characteristic skill, and nearly a mile in front.

Vanderbilt needs only one additional victory to clinch this country's sixteenth and his third consecutive yachting triumph in competition for the America's Cup. The American has now captured seven straight races from his British rival, T. O. M. Sopwith, including the last four of the 1934 series. This year's million-dollar argument may be all over tomorrow, with the fourth race scheduled without further delay.

Four Minutes Ahead.

The white-hulled defender negotiated the full 30 miles in 3 hours, 54 minutes, 30 seconds as she combined the spinnaker run to leeward with a short reach near the finish. Endeavour II was clocked in 3:58:57.

Vanderbilt executed his grand coup this time at the very start, where he achieved a split-second getaway that was a thing of seagoing beauty to watch. On a starboard tack, Ranger crossed the line simultaneous with the signal. It was so close that thousands in the naval gallery held their breaths for fear skipper "Mike" might overplay his hand and risk being recalled.

Gets Off First.

Ranger beat Endeavour by 13 seconds over the line with this brilliant stroke and promptly converted the advantage into ultimate triumph. Making no mistakes as they split tacks, for the most part, on the windward leg, Vanderbilt rounded the mark in the official time of 2 hours, 3 minutes, 55 seconds.

This clipped 30 seconds from the American skipper's own record of 2:04:25, set with the Rainbow when he led the Endeavour I to the turn on the 15-mile windward beat of their first official race on the same course. On that occasion the British sloop quickly overhauled and beat Rainbow on the spinnaker run, home.

Today Sopwith trailed at the mark by 4:03 and the best he could do, on the last 15 miles to leeward in a breeze that hit 12.5 miles per hour at the finish, was to keep Ranger from adding more than 24 seconds to her margin.

Far From Record.

Ranger's elapsed time for the homeward run was 1:50.35, to Endeavour's 1:50.59. This was far from the 15-mile leeward record of 1:17.59 set by the defending yacht, Vigilant in 1893.

Apparently the lifting of about 5,000 pounds of lead ballast from the challenger's bilges had the desired effect of giving her more speed in the relatively light airs prevailing so far.

Today's margin was only a fraction of those achieved by Ranger in her first two victories, 17:05 and 18:32, respectively. Endeavour's performance not only indicated her designer was unduly pessimistic in saying she was 15 minutes slower, on the average, over a 30-mile course, but actually gave the British some hope of yet pulling a triumph out of the fire.

None, including Sopwith, has the slightest notion his sloop can achieve a miracle now. She needs four straight to lift the cup.

Powell's Hit Gives Yanks 10-9 Victory

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 4.—After setting up their run-making parade with Bill Dickey's homer with the bases loaded and Lou Gehrig's twenty-third circuit clout of the season, the Yankees called on the lowly single today to whip the White Sox, 10 to 9.

Chalking up their third straight over the second-place Sox, the Yanks stretched their American League lead to eight full games.

Singles by Joe DiMaggio and Gehrig and a walk to Dickey loaded the bags with one out in the ninth and the score tied at 9-all. In that situation, Jake Powell stepped up and dumped a single over second to break up the ball game.

Although this ninth inning trio of singles ended proceedings, it was the Yankees' customary homer barrage that ruined the White Sox in a slugging battle that saw the Yanks send four pitchers to the mound and the Sox two.

Dickey's clout, coming in the third, was his second four-bagger with the bases loaded in as many days. Gehrig walloped one out of the lot in the seventh with two aboard.

Mike Kreevich belted a homer in the third for the Sox, but it was shorter blows that enabled them to take a four-run lead in the first three innings, only to have it wiped out by the Yanks' five-run barrage in the third. In that frame, the Yanks only made one hit—Dickey's homer—an error and Vernon Kennedy's wildness setting up their scoring.

The Yanks were outhit, 12 to 8, but Kennedy gave eight bases on balls to make up much of the difference, and Dickey and Gehrig, driving in four runs each, did the rest.

The A's kayoed George Coffman and Roxie Lawson with a five-run attack in the sixth inning, but couldn't overcome a lead gained off Harry Kelley, who was thumped for eight runs in the first five innings.

Playground's Girls Advance To Semifinals

Molly Thompson, steady-stroking Chevy Chase Playground tennis star, smashed her way into the semifinals of the Public Recreation girls junior singles tournament yesterday by downing Jean Davis, of Takoma, in a bitterly fought three-set match, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2. Miss Davis was on the verge of winning the match in the second set, several times approaching match point.

Miss Thompson proved herself a real battler, however, and pulled the second set out of the fire. She then went on to take the third without difficulty. Betty Jacob, the blonde Montrose girl, also marched into the semifinals, but without great effort. She swamped Bonnie Frey, of Park View, 6—1, 6—0.

In the quarter-finals today, which will complete the quartet in the semifinals, Shirley Combs, petite Happy Hollow player, engages Edith Lagaundo, of Potomac avenue, and Constance McCulley, of Burroughs, meets Dorothy Blake, of Rosedale. Miss McCulley and Miss Lagaundo both won yesterday, but the latter was taken three stiff sets by Erma Dean, of Garfield.

Miss Thompson and Miss Jacob also set the pace in the doubles, their teams leading the parade into the semifinals. Paired with Margo Mink, Molly continued her fine play as the Chevy Chase duo eliminated Celeste Buehler and Mary Burtner, of Hamilton, 6—3, 6—4.

Heffner, D. C. Boy, Winner In Jr. Tennis

Culver, Ind., Aug. 4 (AP).—The first eight seeded players tonight occupied the eight quarter final brackets as play ran remarkably true to form today in the national junior tennis championships.

Representation was almost equally divided. The Pacific Coast, with Joseph Hunt, of Los Angeles, the titular favorite, John Moreno, also of Los Angeles, and Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, held most of the interest. The East also has three stars left—Isadore Bellis, of Philadelphia; Harry Heffner, of Washington, D. C., and Joseph Fishback, of New York. The Middle West was Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, and the South boasts William Gillespie, of Atlanta.

Hunt won his fourth round easily, defeating Joe Davis, of Nashville, 6—2, 6—3, but in the round previous he was forced to draw on speed and force to eliminate David Johnson, of Washington, 6—1, 7—5.

Heffner late today blasted his way into the quarterfinal round. Heffner, seeded seventh, came from behind with a fine exhibition of steadiness to defeat Larry Dee, of San Francisco, 5—7, 6—2, 6—1.

Heffner is paired with David Johnson, of Washington, in the Junior doubles. They are seeded fourth, and had little trouble today going into the third round with a victory over Myron Lieberman and John Marsh, of St. Paul, 6—2, 6—1.

Robert Carrothers, of Coronado, the boy favorite, ran through Jack Drehl, of Dayton, 6—2, 6—1, to enter the quarter-final round.

Shore, Goelt, Contreras and Mitchell Win

Dooly Mitchell, local favorite; Frank Shore, seeded fifth, and Billy Contreras, unseeded, yesterday advanced to the quarter-finals and Buddy Goelt, No. 1 seeded foreign entry, reached the fourth round of the Middle Atlantic Men's Singles Tennis Tournament being played for The Washington Post trophy on the Edgemoor courts.

Mitchell received unexpected opposition from Charles Heacock, but won out after a struggle in three sets 6—3, 7—9, 6—1. Shore had his own way with James Hardey by 6—1, 6—1, and Contreras went three sets to defeat Billy Turner, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Darkness halted the other fourth round match between Bill Breese, seeded third, and the unseeded Ray Stocklinski, Public Parks player, after the pair had engaged in the longest set of the tournament and were tied in the second. Breese won the opening set 13—11, but they were tied at 4—all when play was stopped.

Phils Down Cubs, 2 to 1, In Thriller

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Wayne La Master, the Philadelphia Phillies' southpaw star, grabbed the runaway Cubs by their shirttails today, and, shading Larry French in a hurlers' duel, 2 to 1, pulled the league-leaders back a notch to within six games of the field.

Johnny Moore's fifth homer of the season, dispatched into the right-field bleachers, provided La Master with his victory margin, while another homer, fashioned by Frank Demaree, spoiled his shutout. Demaree's circuit blow was his twelfth.

La Master's victory was his twelfth against a similar number of defeats. Outside of Demaree's homer, he allowed only two Cubs to get to second and none farther. No two of the seven hits he allowed came in the same inning.

Davis Slams Triple With Bases Jammed

Blow Gives Hildebrand Victory Over DeShong; Travis Adds to League Batting Lead With Three Hits Out of Four Trips to Plate.

By Shirley Povich.

Tobacco-chewing Harry Davis, owner of a modest .283 batting average, raised a Ruthian clout to the deepest corner of Griffith Stadium's centerfield yesterday and lifted the Browns into a 5-to-3 victory over the Nats.

Jimmy DeShong, holding Davis too cheaply, blazed a fast ball down the middle, waist high, and the first baseman, who is batting an inconspicuous seventh in the Browns' batting order, connected for his only hit of the afternoon.

But it was a juicy, run-laden three-bagger over Mel Almada's head, a line drive that took place at a time when the bases were full of Brownies and it climaxed a four-run uprising in the sixth inning that broke a 1-to-1 tie and Washington's one-game winning streak.

Davis teamed nicely with tall, spare-ribbed Oral Hildebrand to win the game for the Brownies. The elongated right-hander was extremely chary with the hits he allowed and gave up only eight to the Nats.

The only balm for the Washington club was Cecil Travis' three hits. The slugging shortstop, after going hitless in his first time at bat, maintained his American League batting lead with three consecutive hits, a double and a pair of singles that boosted his figure to the new high of .384.

For three innings it was a scoreless duel between DeShong and Hildebrand, and then the Brownies reached DeShong for a run in the fourth. It was done very simply. Harland Clift thumped a triple against the narrow screen atop the left field bleachers and Beau Bell scored him with a single to left.

Manager Jim Bottomley and the rest of the Browns whooped and hollered about Umpire Kolls' decision on Clift's blow, claiming it had gone into the seats and should have been ruled as a home run. Kolls said it was a three-bagger and so they compromised by calling it a three-bagger.

DeShong squawked loud and long about Kolls' decision on the fourth ball to Hemsley, claiming it was a strike so Kolls compromised again and the upshot of it was that he called it a ball.

It was at this point that Davis stepped into the picture with his three-bagger and the Browns had three more runs, a 5-1 lead and the ball game.

Washington made the score look more respectable by scoring a run in the sixth when Travis whacked a single to left and Al Simmons thumped a long triple to center and in the seventh they picked up another after Myer and Millies singled to left.

But they muffed their last chance to get back into the ball game. Rather, they were robbed. Because with Travis on base after his third hit of the day, Johnny Stone smacked a terrific line drive into right center and was rounding second base when he looked up and discovered that Sammy West, with no appreciation for the slugging art, had stolen over there against the fence and caught the ball.

Bobby PachoMeets Leonard Del Genio

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Bobby Pacho, Cleveland battler, will try to re-establish himself as a leading welterweight contender tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden when he takes on Leonard Del Genio, former New York Golden Glover, in the feature 10-round bout.

Pacho, knocked out by Ceferino Garcia in his last Garden appearance, and Del Genio meet for the third time. Their first engagement was a draw with Pacho winning the decision in their second encounter.

Two 8-rounders are on the sporting card. Sandy McDonald, of Dallas, and Eddie Hogan, of Waterbury, Conn., meet in a return engagement in the first eight, while Eddie Blunt, New York Negro, and Yustin Sirutis, also of New York, meet in the other eight.

Pro Gridmen Add Howell To the List

Redskins Sign Hero of 1935 Rose Bowl Win Over Stanford U.

That Washington's professional football team, the Redskins, will be pass minded this season is foreseen in the signing yesterday of Dixie Howell, former Alabama University triple-threat halfback and the outstanding college passer of 1934-35.

Most significant is that the Redskins took on Howell after having acquired the services of last year's great passer, Slingin' Sam Baugh, who graduated this spring from Texas Christian University, and it is doubtful that any team in professional football today can boast of two such expert tossers as this pair.

Howell will be remembered as the outstanding figure of the Rose Bowl game of January, 1935, when he directed the Crimson Tide to a sensational 29-13 defeat of Stanford. Completing 9 out of the 11 passes, including one for 67 yards and a touchdown, Howell caused the utter demoralization of a great Stanford team that had taken the lead in the first quarter, 7-0. But his tossing ability was not all that Dixie used in the Tide's amazing victory, for he scored two touchdowns on runs and also averaged 44 yards on his kicks from the line of scrimmage.

The Redskins' management also announced last night the signing of Eddie Michaels, Wilmington, Del., guard and a former Villanova College All-American who held down a regular berth last year with the Chicago Bears in his first pro season.

Sandlot Pick-ups

By Jack Munhall.

A bombshell was cast into the midget section of the National City League yesterday when President Vic Gauzza announced the Hilltop Market nine will be dropped from second half competition because of use of two ineligible players Sunday in its defeat of the leading George Deoudes team . . . at the same time it was announced that Deoudes has been awarded that game which boosts it into the lead, but into a tie with Corr at three victories and no defeats. . . . Thus the Corr-Deoudes clash Sunday takes on all aspects of deciding the second half title and perhaps the section championship. . . . If Deoudes, winners of the first half title, defeats Corr and wins its game the following week, it will be the section champion . . . but on the other hand if Corr emerges on top and triumphs in its game the following week a play-off will be necessary . . . Inasmuch as no other team is considered strong enough to take either Deoudes or Corr Sunday's contest is expected to change the picture one way or another. . . .

Announcement of the forfeit of Hilltop Market's franchise was made following an investigation after a protest was entered last week . . . Suspicions were aroused when it was noted that different names were given Hilltop's winning battery before and following its 8-to-4 defeat of Deoudes . . . on the lineup submitted before the game the pitcher was listed as Kimmel and the catcher as Laddbush, their true names . . . but in the box score published in the newspapers the pitcher was given an alias of Spano and the catcher Nelson. . . . A perusal of contracts disclosed that Kimmel had signed with the J. C. Flood junior team and he was 18 last June while Laddbush on a contract entered in 1935, when his age was given as 15 was found to be 17 now. . . . Midget age rules specify that a player must not be 17 before June 1 . . . and under that rule both Laddbush and Kimmel were overage and therefore ineligible . . . Gauzza ruled both suspended for the remainder of the season . . . adding the suspension would also apply to Laddbush's connection with Flood.

WAX WING had speed from the outset, was steadied along within striking distance of the early pace, drew clear when reaching the stretch and hard ridden at the end barely lasted to hold WINTER SPORT. WISE KING went to the front immediately, drew clear in the opening quarter mile, met a determined bid from MAPLE QUEEN nearing the stretch, drew out again and hard ridden, held sway to the close. MAPLE QUEEN, in closest pursuit of the pace from the start, made her effort at the stretch turn, moved up briefly, but was unable to better her position during the last three-sixteenths. TWOSOME was forwardly placed the entire trip.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT MELODY, $8.40, $4.40, $3.80; BEVEAU, $4.60, $4.20; HAPPY EASTER, $9.40.

BRIGHT MELODY was with the leaders, went to the front going to the first turn, drew clear when straightening out on the backstretch and steadied along under slight restraint, met determined opposition from ZULU LAD nearing the half-mile ground, disposed of this threat and after meeting a bid from HAPPY EASTER, drew out in the last furlong. BEVEAU, unable to keep pace early, worked his way up steadily in the last three furlongs, was up in the closing stride to take the place, but was unable to reach the winner. HAPPY EASTER lost ground around the first turn, continued a wide course and weakened in the stretch after making his effort at the stretch turn.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOULD DARE, $4.60, $3.40, $2.60; FLAMING BELLE, $24.20; HAPPY FLAG, $3.20.

WOULD DARE moved up gradually on the outside in the run down the backstretch, went into an easy lead when HASTY HANNA began tiring and dominated the running to the end. FLAMING BELLE followed along in close pursuit of the race from the start, held on willingly in the drive and although unable to reach the winner, held on stubbornly for second place. HAPPY FLAG, a trailer for the most of the way during the far turn, worked his way up gradually and came gamely in the last five-sixteenths.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY HIGLOSS, $12.20, $5.20, $4.40; BACHELOR DINNER, $5.40, $4.40; CHICOLORADO, $5.40.

LADY HIGLOSS was prominent all the way, fought it out gamely with BACHELOR DINNER for the command, gained slight lead in the stretch and holding on willingly under pressure, increased her lead in the closing sixteenth. BACHELOR DINNER had speed from the start and fought it out willingly after surrendering the lead in the stretch. CHICOLORADO moved up gradually on the inside, loomed up menacingly at the stretch turn and although closing steadily, was unable to reach the first two.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:56. Off 4:56½. Winner, Miss E. GILBERT ELSTON stole away into a long early lead while under slight reserve, withstood bids from LONE HAND nearing the stretch and increased his lead under a hand ride through the last furlong. HUNTERDON trailed the back early, moved up gamely in the last three furlongs and although finishing willingly, was never in a position to endanger the winner and just managed to get up for the place in the closing stride. LONE HAND, under reserve while following the pace, made his bid nearing the stretch, moved up, but unable to reach the leader and faltered slightly in the closing strides.

PARALDA, in nearest chase of pace, fought it out willingly when challenged. PASS SHOT saved considerable ground at the first turn, moved up gamely in the run down the backstretch, loomed up menacingly on the outside nearing the last turn, only to weaken in the drive and barely lasted to save third.

Jacobs Wins N. Y. Boxing Control; Leases Madison Square Garden

This Morning

Budge Better Take That $100,000.

By Shirley Povich.

Persistence may be a very estimable attribute on the tennis court, in the Davis Cup matches and at Wimbledon, but I can hand nothing to young Donald Budge for his persistence in refusing to turn pro, especially since the've raised their offer to $100,000.

POVICH.

If the poor misguided youth is not spoofing us with his declaration that he will never desert the amateur ranks he's no mere idealist He's a chump.

Sure, it's swell to win at Wimbledon and bring back the Davis Cup to America and be the tennis toast of his country and dine and dance at the swell clubs and win the applause of the brass hats in the U. S. L. T. A., but wait until Budge tries to earn that 100 grand the hard way.

• • • •

A few years hence, young Master Budge, who will be wishing he took the $100,000, will discover that his clippings and his Wimbledon title can be exchanged for a cup of coffee at any one-arm lunchroom provided he lays a nickel on the counter.

• • • •

Ellsworth Vines didn't have any qualms about joining the pro ranks after he had finished with the Davis Cup business and neither did Fred Perry, but of course they were older fellows than Budge. And lucky for them they were, because they were rid of the silly notion that they owed their all to the U. S. L. T. A.

• • • •

Budge may, conceivably, be tops in amateur tennis for the next eight or ten years, but the only thing he will have to show in a financial way will be whatever he is able to knock down on the expense accounts and, take it from a guy who knows, expense account profits wouldn't keep a canary in seed over the week-end.

• • • •

Of course, the brass hats who map out the amateur tennis schedule for the young hopefuls have undoubtedly brought great pressure to bear against any ideas Budge may have had against turning pro. Without a player of the Budge type there would be no more reflected glory to bask in and not so many of those expensive junkets to foreign lands for the official badge-wearers and non-playing captains.

• • • •

The red-head Californian is too good a thing to lose and if you're asking me it's because Budge is an impressionable youth, still amenable to the fol de rol anent loyalty to amateur tennis, that the U. S. L. T. A. is able to keep him out of the big dough and, themselves in it.

George Preston Marshall did nothing to disturb the belief that his Washington Redskins will be a potent package in the National Professional football league campaigning next fall when he reached out yesterday and plucked Millard (Dixie) Howell for his backfield.

• • • •

The former Alabama All-American who forward-passed Stanford dizzy in the Rose Bowl game of New Year's Day, 1935, and has consistently spurned a pro football contract, finally joined up with the Redskins because he wanted to play alongside his old pal, Riley Smith.

• • • •

Riley Smith, Marshall's quarterback, was the quarterback of the Alabama team for two years while Dixie Howell was Alabama's bigshot star. When Howell finished the 1934 season as an almost unanimous all-American choice, he was the most sought after player in college ranks.

• • • •

Virtually every team in the pro league offered him a huge bonus for signing a contract but yesterday Marshall won him over without digging in his jeans for anything except a fair salary.

• • • •

Howell had an ill-fated tryout in the Detroit Tigers' outfield in 1935 and since has been playing in the Southern Association. With the Memphis club, he met up with Riley Smith, who was in the oil business in Tennessee during the off-season and Smith it was who persuaded Howell, finally, to cast his lot with pro football.

• • • •

With both Howell and Slinging Sammy Baugh in his backfield, Marshall will be presenting the two most famed college passers since Benny Friedman was dotting eyes with the pigskin for dear old Michigan. And with Notre Dame's Wayne Miller with his long reach and ham-like hands on the catching end, the Redskins' passing attack looms as no less than sensational.

• • • •

And Coach Ray Flaherty will have no compunction against keeping both Howell and Baugh in there at the same time because Howell can gallop with that ball as well as fling it. When Howell is back, the opposing club will have its choice of guessing at a pass, kick or run. That is always confusing.

Fighter's Death Laid To Brain Hemorrhage

Pittsburgh, Aug. 4 (AP).—Coroner's Physician J. W. McMeans said a post-mortem disclosed today that Johnny Page, Chicago lightweight boxer, died of a brain hemorrhage.

Dr. McMeans said the fatal injury was probably caused by Page's head striking the floor of the ring.

Plans Bouts In Bowl, Also For 2 Years

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 4.—Mike Jacobs gained virtual control of big-time boxing in New York City today when he leased Madison Square Garden and the Garden Bowl for two winter seasons and as many summer seasons, while the Garden moved out of the fight game's richest field, a field it has dominated since Tex Rickard leased the old Garden.

Jacobs' contract, which he signed with Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, Garden president, calls for the use of the Garden for professional boxing in the winters of 1937-38 and 1938-39 and the use of the Bowl in Long Island City in 1938 and 1939.

The promoter, who has fought the Garden for control of New York boxing since he gained control of Joe Louis' contract, said he planned to present a series of "big shows" at the arena.

"I hope to bring the Garden back to where it was under Tex Rickard," said Jacobs, one-time partner with Rickard in his promotional ventures. "I intend to start with a card on Friday, October 3, and it will be as good a show as I can make it."

Both Well Satisfied.

Like Jacobs, Col. Kilpatrick was well pleased with the arrangement.

"It is a matter of business with us," he said. "The guarantees offered by Jacobs are quite to the Garden's interests and offer us more money than we have been making. I think it will turn out well for both parties concerned."

The agreement on the lease was brought about mainly through the efforts of Bill Carey, commissioner of sanitation, and former head of the Garden. It concedes, in effect, that the control of boxing goes with the control of the heavyweight title, which Jacobs, using Joe Louis as proxy, wrested from the Garden this year.

Under Kilpatrick, Jimmy Johnston has been in charge of boxing at the Garden. When informed of the lease today, he said he was surprised, but offered no comment.

Kilpatrick said that with the Garden out of the fight business "for the time being" he did not know what Johnston's status would be. Johnston and Jacobs have long been at odds.

Challenged for Control.

Since he found in Joe Louis the fight game's biggest attraction, Jacobs has challenged the Garden for control of the fight game. A friend and partner of Tex Rickard, he was a ticket broker, when the Garden dominated the fight game after Rickard's death. But with Louis tied to a contract he was ready to take a shot at profesional boxing's richest field.

Jacobs promoted the Louis-Carnera bout and the Louis-Baer bouts. When Louis won the title from Braddock in June Jacobs added another champion to a list of fighters which includes Barney Ross, welterweight champion, and a host of lesser lights. He was the man behind the Louis-Braddock bout in Chicago, although the bout was credited to Chicago promoters.

Jacobs also numbers the Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds among his outdoor arenas, and thus has control of the cities three biggest outdoor arenas. His Twentieth Century Sporting Club staged bouts indoors in the past season at the Hippodrome.

Bosox Take Double Bill From Tribe

Come from Behind in Both Games to Win, 8-6 and 6-5.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 4.—The Red Sox came from behind twice today to take both games of a double-header from the Cleveland Indians, winning the first, 8 to 6, and the second, 6 to 5. The nightcap victory gave the Boston team eight-in-a-row, not counting Sunday's tie. Cronin's double in the ninth, with two out and Cleveland leading, scored Mills and Cramer for the 6-5 tally.

Dodgers Take 10-7 Decision From Pirates

Losers Use Six Hurlers in Fray; Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 4.—The Brooklyn Dodgers snapped a three-game losing streak today by banging out 15 hits, seven of them for extra bases, to wallop the Pirates, 10 to 7, in a free-swinging battle.

Nine pitchers were called in for both sides before the barrage wound up. The Pirates used six, one short of the league record, and the Dodgers had three in action, although Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, who started.

Boston, Aug. 4 (AP).—Roy Hughes, of the Cleveland Indians, made 11 put outs in the first game of the Red Sox-Indians double-header here today, to tie the major league record for second basemen's put outs. The Red Sox won the game, 8 to 6.

Hughes also had four assists, but his total of 15 chances fell 3 short of the record. He collected two hits in five times up.

Snook Ties Burnett at Woodmont

Washington, Baltimore and Frederick were represented on an 8-2-2 ratio yesterday in a Maryland State links handicap event at Woodmont, with Volney Burnett, Indian Spring, and Carl Snook, Catoctin Club, of Frederick, pacing the field of 12 with net 68's.

Burnett turned in the lowest round of the year by an amateur golfer on the Bethesda course, when he paired rounds of 35 for his 70 score, one stroke over par. Snook shot 37-36—73, and deducted a 5 handicap to tie Volney's 68. Tied at net 69's, but out of the prize-winning circle were Ken Lafferty, Indian Spring, with 78-9—69, and Joe Balestri, Beaver Dam, with a like score.

The Maryland State amateur champion birdied the first hole, but lost the stroke on the second with a bogey 5. He was over again at the fifth, but regained the shot to par by deucing the shot eighth and turned in 35, par figures.

Burnett scored eight 4's and a trey on his second trip around the course, again missing par on the par 3 fifth hole for his lone hole over regulation figures. The score ranks second only to Ralph Beach, Suburban pro's 68, for the lowest round over the tricky nine-hole layout this year.

Bobby Brownell, coming back in 35 after an outgoing 41 for a 76 gross and 72 net, and Emmet Gary's net 76 were the other cards turned in.

Cox, Dusek Feature Mat Card For Ladies' Night at Ball Park

It will be Ladies' Night and Softball Night tonight at Griffith Stadium on Promoter Joe Turner's wrestling card, which will offer Joe Cox, Bill Sledge, Ernie Dusek and Red Russell as the principal performers.

Cox will cut up with Bill Sledge, the former Rice Institute football star, in one half of the double windup, and in the other half the bouncing Bohemian, Dusek, will attempt to pin Russell, the former Texas sheriff.

Taking a leaf from the pages of Griffith baseball, Promoter Turner will admit all women free by way of steaming up interest among the fairer sex in the game of grunt and groan. All the ladies have to do is walk up to the window, pay the customary 25 cents tax, and they can see the double wind-up bouts and the three 30-minute supporting matches.

The softball ceremonies will take place just before the last bout. Members of the Ehrlich Poultry team, champions of the Community Center Softball League, will be honored with prizes and a trophy, with Announcer James Lake and League President Harry English presiding.

There will be three 30-minute supporting tussles, with Dr. Len Hall, the "Whataman" from Nebraska who claims all the championships that are to be claimed; Dr. Hall, a reformed dentist, meets Mayes McLain, the one time Haskell Indian, and it is rumored that he will claim the District championship, if he wins.

In other 30-minute scraps, Binitiri LaRue, champion of France and Roumania, debuts against Abie Coleman, the Jewish shotgun, and Walter Podolock, just in from the Pacific Coast, will drape his 230 pounds around Eli Fischer, the New Yorker, who quit the study of law to concentrate on wrestling.

The Cox-Sledge match promises to provide a whirlpool of action, with Sledge regarded as a dangerous man. Sledge went haywire last Thursday and downed George Lenihan at the stadium. Cox is anxious to make amends for his defeat two months ago at the hands of Rough Rudy Dusek.

Fireworks start at 8:30.

Wheat Rallies After Slump To New Lows

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Late rallies of Chicago wheat prices today more than overcame downturns that carried wheat and all other grains to bottom levels heretofore unreached this season.

Nearly 6 cents a bushel overnight tumble of Liverpool wheat quotations was largely responsible for the transient setback of grain values here. The chief reason given for the bearish action of the Liverpool wheat market, however—selling pressure from Russia and the Danube region—was soon looked upon by most traders here as misleading. Aggressive buying on Chicago wheat price declines became an outstanding feature as trade drew to an end.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ½ cent higher, compared with yesterday's finish; September, 113⅜ to 1.13½; December, 1.13⅞ to 1.14⅛; May, 1.15⅝ to 1.15¾. Corn, 1 cent to 2¾ up; September, 96⅞ to 97; December, 65⅞ to 66⅛; May, 67⅝ to 67¾. Oats unchanged to ¼ advance; September, 28½, and rye unchanged to ⅞ bulge; September, 77⅞. Provisions results were unchanged to 15 cents off.

The Market

Railroad Stocks Lead Advance in Moderate Trading; Bonds Uncertain; Wheat Higher.

New York, Aug. 4.—Stocks improved a little in a sales exchange of about the same volume as yesterday, 900,000 shares, but contrary to the previous day's operations the best prices were made in the late dealings. Bonds were uncertain, particularly in the higher grades. September wheat closed a half cent higher at $1.13½ a bushel.

In stocks a pleasing feature of the trading was a turn in the railroad shares, looking depressed for the past several sessions. Nothing in the news inspired the change of sentiment, unless it was perhaps the suggestion that higher wage demands might be trimmed considerably and that the excellent crops in the West will mean a great deal to all roads this year. Gains of 1 to 2 points were made by Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson, Great Northern, Central, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Steel shares hardened after a slow start. In the last hour U. S. Steel had recovered brightly, Bethlehem had recrossed par and others in the group looked strong. Motors also stiffened, but General was a bit of a laggard. Copper stocks again advanced, but the movement was not so vigorous as it was yesterday. A good deal of talk was heard about the firmer foundation for the copper market.

Stocks favored with gains of 1 to 6 points were: American Woolen common and preferred, subject to some favorable figures and remarks in the report; General Refractories, General Steel Castings preferred, International Paper preferred, International Silver, Pillsbury, Sears Roebuck, Timken Roller and Westinghouse. Western Union declined. Woolworth made up much of its previous loss.

Freight Gains.

Midweek trade figures are encouraging. Railroad freight traffic last week moved up again. Car loadings, according to reports of leading lines, rose nearly 2 per cent over the preceding week and were around 5 per cent above a year ago. Traffic is approaching the best in several years, but the rate of gain plainly is growing smaller. Production of electricity last week fell a little, certainly a seasonal development, but it held well above a year ago. In that field also the gain over the preceding year is slackening.

In the steel industry preparations for expansion in some industries are not particularly lively and the concomitant slackness of new orders is being felt in steel mill books. At the same time the amount of work on hand is calculated to maintain activity for another month at least. By that time it is hoped the motor industry will come into the market, and, if wage matters be settled, the railroads also will feel like buying more equipment. Foreign demand for steel is rising and the scrap market remains strong.

In the field of international finance, the French franc, after a week or so of comparative stability, is again showing signs of breaking. The French support fund is reported buying forward francs, but the persistent pressure on the market suggests that no appreciable repatriation of French funds is taking place. Meanwhile the Government is formulating plans for meeting the autumn bond maturities, failure of which probably will result in a forced loan of confiscation of capital or a real collapse of the currency.

Over-Counter.

A few brokers are doing a fair business these days disposing of large blocks of listed stocks in the over-counter market. Many of them wish they could find more such business. The market is thin on the exchange and even over the counter a good deal of time is required to dispose of good-sized holdings, but at least such sales or purchases do not bring much change in the price as quoted on the exchange. The point is that the stock exchange is by no means the sole trading field for securities listed upon it. Among the blocks of stocks recently sold or now in the process of disposal over the counter are Woolworth, 88,000 shares; Commercial Credit, 15,000; Commercial Investment Trust, 20,000; Colgate-Palmolive, 85,000; United Gas, 10,000, and Pacific Gas & Electric, 10,000 shares.

American Locomotive.

A stock exchange firm is said to be feeling considerable embarrassment over an estimate it made of American Locomotive's six months' profits, which was made the basis of a recommendation to buy the shares. Estimates of $2.50 to $3 a share were made. About a week ago a Wall Street news service suggested that the estimates were too high, and that about $1 a share was all that would be shown. The six months' report of the company was sent around today and was in the possession (or the figures were) of numerous brokers, for official publication tomorrow. In almost any brokerage house visitors were told that the report would show about a dollar a share. Whether the stock had had some hurried support or whether it would need some was a matter of speculation.

Baltimore & Ohio.

Proverbs flow freely at the offices of the Baltimore & Ohio. When questioned today as to what would happen regarding the road's September first general mortgage maturity of $4,427,000 and $1,025,000 equipment trust certificates which matured July 1 and August 1, if I. C. C. approval of the application for a $5,000,000 RFC loan was denied, an official remarked "that if the dog didn't catch the rabbit there would be no rabbit stew." It was further stated that the B. & O. didn't have "all its eggs in one basket" and that in case of an RFC denial other means of meeting the obligations could undoubtedly be found.

Steel Orders Assure Heavy August Output

Backlogs are Declining and Deliveries Improving.

New York, Aug. 4.—"Steel companies' backlogs of orders are steadily declining, says Iron Age in its weekly summary today, affording better deliveries to customers, but are still substantial enough to assure a continued high rate of production through August, particularly if the expected upturn in buying for autumn requirements gets under way this month, of which there are already scattered indications. A leading Chicago producer, for example, has booked the largest volume of new business in four weeks, largely a reflection of the outstanding activity in farm machinery and equipment.

"The automobile industry, slower than expected in making volume purchases for 1938 models will come into the market in a bigger way within the next two or three weeks, perhaps ushering in the fall buying movement for industry generally. With automobile buying at a minimum, total volume of new steel business is running considerably behind shipments.

Railroad Buying.

"An unexpected development at this time is the appearance of new inquiries for railroad equipment, both domestic and foreign, perhaps the forerunner of a secondary buying movement by the railroads. While new purchases now would not relieve a possible car shortage this fall, the equipment would be received in time to replace cars that might get into bad order from excessive usage. A number of car shops are in position to take on new work almost immediately.

"The largest domestic railroad inquiry is from the Texas & Pacific for 500 to 1,000 box cars and 100 hopper cars. The Cambria & Indiana is in the market for 500 cars, the Virginian will rebuild 1,000 gondola cars of large capacity in its own shops, and the Peoria & Pekin Union has ordered 50 cars. Export inquiry includes 45 locomotives for the South African Railways, while an order for 500 steel box cars has been placed by the Sorocabana Railways of Brazil.

Lead Price Lifted to 6¼ Cents Per Lb.

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—St. Joseph Lead Co. today boosted the price of lead one-quarter of a cent a pound to 6.25 cents, New York, and 6.10 cents, East St. Louis. Today's rise was the first change since April 7 last, when the quotation was 1 cent a pound to 6 cents, New York.

Foreign Markets.

London, Aug. 4.—Stock prices pointed upward in today's trading. Volume was smaller as the end of the current account approached. Transatlantic declined, but recovered partiality at the close. Industrials and oils were steady. Gilt-edged issues and German bonds firmed. Mines were irregular.

Paris—Bourse issues closed generally firm today after early irregularity. Industrials were the best gainers. International issues displayed some weakness. Government bonds were steady. Bank of France ended 50 points net higher. Suez Canal declined 213 points.

Liverpool—Increased offerings of Russian and Danubian wheat and weakness at Winnipeg depressed wheat futures today. Milling demand was poor. The market rallied a little toward the close and ended quiet, 3⅛ to 3¾d lower. Cotton advanced on Bombay buying and short covering with offers light. Final prices were 1 to 2 points higher. News of another high crop estimate checked gains in late trading.

The dollars closed in London at 4.98⅛ to the pound, up ⅛ of a cent. In Paris it finished at the equivalent of 3.752 cents to the franc, compared with the overnight New York rate of 3.753 cents.

SEC Urges Trustee For Utilities P. & L.

The Securities and Exchange Commission voted unanimously yesterday to press its petition for the appointment of an independent trustee in the reorganization proceedings of the Utilities Power & Light Corporation under section 77b of the bankruptcy act before United States District Court Judge William H. Holly in Chicago.

Before reaching this decision, the commission heard arguments from representatives of substantial security holders and creditors who sought to persuade the commission to change its position. After considering these arguments, Commissioner George C. Mathews, acting chairman, said:

"The commission feels that the appointment of a trustee not affiliated with any of the interested parties in the case is essential to a proper consideration and solution of the company's problems under the holding company act. Furthermore, it does not believe that the appointment of such an independent trustee would in any way delay the progress of the reorganization. It calls attention to the fact that Judge Holly has set a date early in October for hearing on the proposed plan, wholly independently of the present issue."

Int. Paper Co. Plans to Resume Dividends

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Directors of International Paper & Power Co. voted today to take steps to effect the company's plan for change in capitalization. Permission to rearrange its $150,000,000 capital structure and clear the way for resuming dividends by issuing new stock in exchange for present securities was given today by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The company said that application must be made to list the new shares on the New York Stock Exchange and for their registration under the securities and exchange act of 1934. Directors expect they can fix the date for the exchange of the new securities for the old not later than October 1.

Canada's Foreign Trade Rises 23.8% in Year

Ottawa, Aug. 4 (Canadian Press).—Canada's external trade shot upward to $1,851,365,000 in the 12 months ended June 30. This was a gain of 23.8 per cent over $1,494,863,000 in the preceding 12 months, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showed in a review published today.

SEC Issues Over-Counter Code of Ethics

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission will require over-the-counter dealers and brokers, after October 1, to disclose their special interests in transactions before completing sales of securities to investors. The regulation was embodied in a new code of ethics the commission announced for that type of investment houses. The purpose, officials said today, is to forwarn investors of the motives of dealers or brokers who advise certain investments.

A broker or dealer, for instance, will be required to tell whether he is selling a security for his own profit or merely as the agent of another person, whether he is associated with or paid by the underwriter of the security, and what commission or fee he is getting for promoting the sale.

Discretionary Trades.

The commission also adopted rules prohibiting brokers or dealers from making excessive commitments for accounts of clients who have authorized the brokers or dealers to use their own discretion in investing money.

Another rule will bar brokers or dealers from describing as "market" prices any quotations on over-the-counter securities not determined by independent purchase and sale offers made by persons not associated with brokers or dealers.

The order also will prohibit payments of commissions, or fees, for promoting purchases of new securities. This does not apply, however, to payment of salaries to regular salesmen whose activities are not limited to specific securities.

Mild Pay-Hour Bill Is Adopted For House Vote

Southern Representatives, who vowed to fight it without gloves. They are not expected to band against the present compromise, and proof of its more general acceptability is that even Wood, sponsor of the more sweeping amendment, voted for the Green compromises today.

Under the new House bill, the board may not lower wage rates than those fixed by collective bargaining agreements, may not set wages lower than prevailing wages in a community, and may not interfere with the operation of the wage-hour sections of the Walsh-Healey act.

Imports Limited.

Interstate commerce shipments will not be permitted by foreign producers of products manufactured under working conditions inferior to those of American industries.

An exemption granted by the Senate to employes in local retailing capacities was first knocked out, then reinserted and finally granted only to retail employes working as outside salesmen on commission. Express company employes, exempted by the Senate, were denied exemption in the new House draft, thus extending the act to thousands of maintenance-of-way employes, it was said. Independent contractors (truckers) who haul farm products from farm to market were defined as nonagricultural workers. Farm workers are exempt.

At Mrs. Norton's suggestion, women are to come under the operation of the bill in every way that men are to be effected.

The "graveyard shift"—midnight to 6 a. m.—is discouraged by placing such work for women and children in the category of "substandard labor conditions," and time-and-a-half overtime pay must be given men who work those hours.

The board membership of five must be named by geographical considerations under the House bill—one member to come from each of the four outer sections of the country and one from the central part—with one man representing employers and one the employes. Each State and Territory and the District is to have its own director—a new section of the bill.

Southern "Differential" Included.

The section exempting the board's special officials and chiefs from civil service regulations was stricken, and by motion of Representative Robert Ramspeck, Democrat, a "Southern differential" was written into the measure, despite the defeat of a smiliar section in the Senate, where it was proposed by Senattor Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina.

This clause provides that "differences in unit costs in manufacturing, occasioned by varying local tions, or other factors entering into natural resources, operating condithe cost of production," shall be considered by the board in declaring minimum wage orders.

Another exemption was added to the long Senate list when persons employed in compressing and storing cotton were added to the already exempted cotton-ginning employes, as well as those employed in processing cottonseed.

This last action, as well as the addition of his amendments, was hailed by Green last night in a statement for the press, when he noted that "the specific limits of the board's jurisdiction over wages and hours has been reduced to slight significance . . . Through the adoption of these amendments the bill is made an effective collective bargaining statute. The fear of Fascist control over labor and capital is definitely removed and made impossible."

Democrats Woo Dove of Peace, Plan Love Feast

Get-Together Announced as Farley Says Rift Is 'Moonshine.'

did so in the face of one indirect threat of retaliation. For a few weeks ago the Governor of his State, M. Clifford Townsend, visited the White House. Later he said his State organization would not support Van Nuys for another term.

Indiana's nominating convention is not slated till spring, but, meantime friends of Van Nuys are taking no chances. Twenty-five Democrats, most of them court plan opponents, have promised to stump the State if the Administration comes out against him.

Meantime, Van Nuys, and every other Senate Democrat except Mrs. Hattie Caraway, has been invited to next Tuesday night's harmony dinner. You see, it's to be a "stag" and that lets out the Senate's only woman member.

Arrangements are in charge of a special committee of five, with Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, chairman, and young Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, Senate first termer, secretary. Two prominent court plan opponents—Senators Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, are on the peace mission. And No. 5 is Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, an Administration stalwart.

Yesterday McKellar and Truman carried a special invitation to the President and came away with assurances that the Chief will "look in" if he can.

"Some of us were talking things over the other day and the idea occurred to us that it would be a fine thing to have dinner together," added McKellar.

Rank and file of Senate Democrats received the glad tidings in a form invitation, dated August 2. It read:

"My dear Senator:

"You are cordially invited to attend a dinner given in honor of our new Democratic leader, Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, on August 10, 1937, at the Raleigh Hotel, 7 p. m.

"All Democratic members of the Senate are invited. The President will look in during the evening. The Vice President will preside. A prompt acceptance will be appreciated."

Not a word about "harmony" in that. But consider the seating arrangements. On Garner's right will be Senator Barkley, who won the Senate leadership by a margin of one vote over Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, after the President's "Dear Alben" letter to the Kentuckian. On Garner's left will be Harrison, who lost by that same margin.

And consider the guests at the speakers' table. They include Carter Glass, oldest Senator in years but the most sprightly in condemnation of major Administration policies; Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, of South Carolina, oldest Senator in service, who recently sunk the Administration's farm bill; Senator Burton K. Wheeler, liberal Montanan, who led court plan opposition forces; Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Senatorial Democratic campaign committee; James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Senate Administration whip, and McKellar, chairman of the harmonizing committee.

Center of a series of preliminary pow-wows and peace pipe smoking has been the Senate's most thorough political pragmatist —Vice President Garner.

Returning from Texas following the death of Majority Leader Joe Robinson, Garner quietly escorted the court bill back to the Judiciary Committee for burial. Then he bluntly told Democratic members of the committee the President is still the head of his party, and they'd better stop laying him out.

Garner was pretty aggressive for a peace-seeker, but he went right ahead. He thought it would be a good idea for court plan opponents to drop by the White House and shake hands with the President. Burke took the hint and broke the ice. When Burke left the President he told reporters: "The danger of a Democratic split has been averted."

Child Paralysis Rate in District Lowest in Years

Washington's infantile paralysis rate is the lowest for many years, Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the District Bureau of Preventive Disease, said last night, as the United States Public Health Service reported a 300 per cent increase for the country.

The Public Health Service said reports for the week ending July 31 showed 360 new cases in 46 States. The nine-year median for the comparable week is 117 cases.

Dr. Cumming was happy over Washington's current record. No new case has been reported in the last two months; only three cases have been reported since January 1. Last year about 50 cases were reported during the first seven months.

"It's very pleasing," he said, in reference to the record. "It probably means that we are not going to have many cases at all." Reports from Virginia and Maryland, he added, show "no unfavorable trends," and are normal for this time of year.

Coroner May Hold Lift Death Inquest

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald refused to issue a death certificate yesterday for James Steadman, 21, colored, crushed to death in an elevator in the Palace Laundry plant, Tuesday. An inquest appeared likely.

J. M. Brown, chief elevator inspector, reported that safety devices were taken off the elevator and that a grounded wire allowed it to operate when the doors were open. Brown added that one of the two gates on the car was missing.

A company inspector approved the elevator a few days before the accident and a District inspector did so on June 8.

Bob Burns Says—

When you see two people together and neither one of 'em sayin' a word for a long time, you can bet they're mighty good friends or they're married. I don't know why it is that when people meet strangers they feel like they have'ta keep chattin' away all the time.

I had a cousin down home who never had anything to say to the girls but we never thought nothin' of it because he knew 'em all so well, but finally one day a city girl visited home and my cousin took her to a dance. The next morning we were all so surprised to learn that he was engaged to her. We all said, "How in the world did you happen to propose to that girl? Was it love at first sight?" And my cousin said, "No, I danced with her three times and I couldn't think of anything else to say!"—Bob Burns.

Inquiry.

From Maxton, N. C., comes this inquiry: "Will there be need of a large force to carry out the provisions of the wages and hours bill? If so, from what source would the personnel be drawn?"

The Civil Service Personnel office says that the whole matter is one of conjecture—that there would probably be a board of five members, as is proposed, a group of attorneys and experts and a considerable number of employes from outside the Civil Service.

The entire representation of the Library of Congress Branch to the Board of Representatives of Local No 2, N. F. F. E., has resigned to enter the U. F. W. A The four Representatives have written Alexander Toth, president of the Branch, a letter which says in part:

"We, the undersigned, your Representatives to the Board of Local No. 2, herewith surrender our offices, and our membership in Federal Employees Union, Local No. 2. We take this step only after deep thought and consultation, believing as firmly as ever in the value of unionism to Government workers and fully recognizing the disadvantage of a divided front * * *."

"Our decision to leave the N. F. F. E. is the result not merely of our dissatisfaction with that organization but of the formation of another union which we believe offers us the opportunity of supporting the principles which we approve.

"This organization is the United Federal Workers of America, affiliated with the C. I. O. Believing that the destiny of Government workers is bound up with that of other workers we feel that our place is in an organization which will unite Government employees with other sections of the labor movement instead of isolating them in a separate group."

Miss Ethelyn Chrane, who six years ago was seriously incapacitated when, she contends, a Government physician in the New York Sub-Treasury placed a skin-test patch on her arm in a medical experiment, is in Washington seeking an adjustment from the Government.

Her case is interesting and has attracted wide attention. Prior to December, 1931—when the incident occurred—Miss Chrane ha' worked in the U. S. Public Health Service for 13½ years. She says she was sitting at her desk, performing her stenographical work, when the physician came in and placed the plaster on her arm. A severe infection set in within a short time. Subsequently she said she learned that the physician was conducting experiments, seeking to learn the injurious properties in rubber as these might affect workmen in industries.

"He should have used a guinea pig," Miss Chrane stated yesterday.

The Quest for Talent Contest, being conducted for Government employees at the Wardman Park Hotel, has proved so successful that auditions will not be brought to a close tonight, as was originally intended. A last audition will be held next Thursday night. Twenty or more contestants will array themselves this evening. Among these will be the well known Government Printing Office Quartet. Other performers will be: Thomas F. McCarthy, Arthur A. Rind, and Stanley Karmazin, of the Printing Office; Edna C. Moreland, Caroline Mackay, A. H. Christie, John Harold Seata and Jeff Denis, of the Social Security Board; Eula Lee Collins, Louis J. Pike and Lester Fossick, of the F. C. A.; Sam C. Cotton, of the F. B. I., will sing; the Postoffice has two entries, James Eliot Ferry and R. W. Smith; Spencer Howell, of the Library of Congress, will compete with a magic set. Others are: Hugh B. Provin, of R. F. C.; Kenneth L. Burgess, of Commerce; Edna Wilson, Labor, and Richard A. Hill, Federal Reserve Board.

This may be the first outing of a U. F. W. A. lodge: Games, entertainment and refreshments will feature the picnic to be held by U. F. W. A. Local No. 1 (Social Security Board) on Sunday in Grove 10, Rock Creek Park. The hours are 4 to 11 P. M. The event is arranged by the local in support of the S. S. B. Tennis Team. Amateur night will be spotlighted in the evening's campfire program. Prizes will be awarded to winners in the athletic events and in the amateur entertainment.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right. All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every day, most many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess fat and fuel tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" aids in a furnace. Now, physicians combat this condition by dosing this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to relieve with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment at once, that millions have used successfully to lose that excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. Adv.

Questioned on $15,000 Gift to Party

Robert R. Young (above), who recently bought control of the Van Sweringen rail empire, stoutly denied before the Senate Railway Committee yesterday any connection between his $15,000 gift to the Democratic Party and his business. He said the contribution was made from personal funds.

ingen system, "the cheap, crooked tactics which have been used by the old Allegany crowd" must be halted, "if you want people to have any confidence in you."

Young promised that "if we find anyone who has a bad record he certainly will be replaced."

Tells of $45,000 Gift.

Wheeler's warning came after S. J. Kaplan, committee examiner, had accused an Alleghany employe, R. J. Morfa, of using "questionable tactics" in promoting a 1934 reorganization of the company. Young was not then associated with the firm.

Before Kaplan made his statement, Young had testified he contributed $15,000 to the Democratic National Committee "entirely out of my own personal funds." The donation, he said, had "no connection" with business he had pending before several Federal agencies.

Kaplan introduced a memorandum from Alleghany files, in which Morfa related how he had obtained a list of Alleghany bondholders from the Investors Economic Service, Inc., of Milwaukee.

"They made me promise we would not divulge the source of this information," the memo read, "under no circumstances are we to tell their clients where we secured names, etc."

Conferred With Lamont.

Young remarked that he did not see questionable implications in the memorandum, and asked that Morfa be heard "before he is condemned."

"Well, the investment house evidently thought that something was wrong," Wheeler replied, "because they made him promise not to disclose where he got the names."

"Well, I didn't want to fire anybody till I was more familiar with the situation," Young, who acquired control of the system only a few months ago, answered when Wheeler asked why the old staff had been retained.

Young said he had discussed the consolidation program with Thomas Lamont, a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., and that Lamont "wanted to be helpful."

"We felt we had Morgan's tacit approval," the New York broker said, explaining that he "hoped" the famous banking firm would advise its clients to participate in the reorganization.

House to Pass On D. C. Bills Next Monday

The District is to have one more legislative day in the House, notwithstanding the drive for adjournment. House leaders yesterday told Chairman Palmisano, of the District Committee, that Monday would be allotted to local legislation.

Three bills on the calendar are:

A bill to regulate the adoption of children in the District, providing for an investigation of both the child and the prospective foster parents, holding up a final decree of adoption for six months after the child has lived with the foster parents, and protecting the child's rights of inheritance and succession.

A bill to liberalize and alter the liquor control act here. It would permit the sale of hard liquor by the drink at lunch counters along with beer and wine, stop the direct-to-consumer flow of tax-free liquor into this city from New York and elsewhere and vest in the courts rather than the Commissioners authority to review decisions of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

In the Senate Chairman King, of the District Committee, ordered a hearing for Monday at 10:30 o'clock on two bills dealing with taxicabs in the District. One would limit the number of cabs here and the other would require that cabs carry insurance of $5,000 against bodily injury or death and 1,000 against destruction of property.
